Journalists In Touch With the People Support Republican Party.

THEY LEAD IN THE FIGHTING

Pennsylvania Newspapers in the Interior of the State Stalwart and Aggressive in the Campaign About to Close.

A significant and gratifying feature of the present political canvass in Pennsylvania is the unanimity and the cordiality with which editors of Republican newspapers throughout the state are supporting the Republican state ticket. The insurgent combinings do not seem to have shaken the faith of the Republican journalists, whose profession brings them in touch with the people and enables them to get the real sentiment of the Republican voters of the state.

The editor of the Gazette of Pittston, of the Union party for state treasurer, refuses to support him in this campaign and gives his reasons:

"The Gazette," he says, "is a Republican paper. It believes in the Republican party, at its worst, is better and safer than the Democratic party at its best. There are bad men in it and good men in the Democratic party, but on the whole, as it reads the history of the country and of the state, better results have accrued from Republican than from Democratic administration. When reforms are needed, it would sooner trust the Republican party than any other party to make them, and it believes that they can more easily be made within the Republican party than over its prostrate form."

AS TO THE UNION PARTY.

"The Union party is not a permanent party," continues the editor of The Gazette. "It represents only the ambitions and prejudices of a few men. It is playing for capture of the Republican party through the process of defeating the Republican candidates until it is strong enough to compel the Republican organization to surrender to its dictation. The Democratic party—more properly, the small group of trading politicians who have control of the Democratic machinery, is in a temporary deal with it on a basis of a division of the spoils in the event that there shall be spoils to divide.

"We see no chance for real reform in the triumph of such a sordid arrangement. Mr. Coray may think that, if elected state treasurer, he would be personally strong enough to enforce reforms. If so, he overrates his strength. He could do nothing more than keep the accounts straight. The law provides how they shall be kept and how the state money shall be handled. Mr. Coray could not change that law. He could only enforce it. We believe it is enforced now.

"Republicans have great reason for confidence in the sterling worth of Frank G. Harris, Republican candidate for the office of state treasurer, and will elect him, along with the rest of the ticket, by a rousing majority, at the polls on the coming election day."

THE ENTIRE COUNTRY INVOLVED

"Republicans owe it to their party to give zealous support this fall to the candidates on both the county and state tickets," says editor James B. Borland, of the Franklin (Pa.) Evening News. "It is no time for a Republican to present a vote as a compliment. At the present time there is a condition unusual for an 'off' year, wherein the entire country is involved. An indifferent majority in the state of Pennsylvania would prove humiliating to those who have always spoken and upheld the Republican administration. The voters should not allow themselves to be misled by the argument that it will make no difference this year which way they vote. It does make a material difference. Let us show to President Roosevelt that he has the confidence and backing of Pennsylvania by rolling up a good old-fashioned majority in an 'off' year. For a Republican to be indifferent to the situation will be a species of recklessness, of the kind that it will be hard to excuse. Get out and vote yourself, and ask other Republicans to do so.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

"The man who has a chronic craving for office and always fails in attaining it naturally gravitates in the direction of still another discontented people," remarks the editor of the Allentown Chronicle and News. "Having no special issue on which to base their defection from party, the cry of 'reform' is at once the handiest and oldest that suggests itself. That is the reason why we today see Republican malcontents, repudiated office-seekers, allying themselves to that hungry of hungry parties, the Democratic, hoping that through the fusion a few crumbs may fall under the table for the appeasement of their appetites. It is a game venerable with age, but it deceives no sensible man."

A TRANSPARENT SCHEME.

"We see no argument," says the editor of the Lancaster New Era, commenting upon the Union party, "why any Republican, confident in the integrity of his party and its representatives, should lend himself to the rehabilitation of a confessedly corrupt organization, led and controlled by men whose records certainly do not inspire confidence in the sincerity of their professions. The scheme is certainly too transparent and the trap too plain to deceive the sturdy Republicans of Lancaster county and make them parties to a movement whose ultimate object is the election of a Democratic governor and a Democratic United States senator."

A TRIO OF STALWARTS.

"There is hardly a probability," says the Johnstown Tribune, "that less than four figures will be required to designate the majority for each Republican candidate on the county ticket, and five figures will be used to designate the majority of each Republican candidate on the state ticket."

"In view of the fact that the original suggestion of state fusion came from Blair county," remarks the Altoona Gazette, "much will doubtless be expected of her by the insurgent leaders in Philadelphia. Little Blair is going to roll up one of her old-fashioned, straight-out Republican majorities in November. The fusion movement 'died a-borning' hereways."

"Democrats are utterly hopeless so far as Pennsylvania is concerned," declares the Holidays Register, "they know that they can't come within 300,000 of electing their party ticket. They would like, therefore, to delude 150,000 or 200,000 Republicans into voting with them. This is the whole meaning of the fusion movement. It simply means the placing of Democrats in office again. The people remember their experience of this kind so well as to ask to be forever delivered from such a calamity again."
