

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for anything but you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and one dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

STORIES OF RICHES.

They Come from All Parts of Our Wonderful Country.

New Deposits of Precious Metals and Minerals Discovered in the Far West—The Wonders of San Nicolas.

[Special California Letter.] THIS is, undoubtedly, the golden age of the scientist and explorer. Modern discovery has made transportation and communication between distant points so inexpensive and easy of accomplishment, and new inventions rendered it possible for excavating and prospecting to be carried on so rapidly that work which formerly required years of labor can now be accomplished in a few months. Not many years have passed since the financial world was electrified by news of the discoveries of precious metals at Cripple Creek. That the wonderful fields in that vicinity are not likely to be soon exhausted is proven by the great gold strike just made here. It is believed that the miners have found the dome of a large crater from which immense wealth will be extracted. Sylvanite and rich quartz glitter in the fine talc. The vein seems to rise from a chimney in which is a great lake of unknown depth. The decomposed matter is of a bluish color and sparkles with grains of precious metals. Thousands of tons are already in sight.

Wonderful stories reach our ears of the great mineral wealth of the Philippines, and as soon as the government paves a legal way, it will be eagerly trodden by hurrying feet from all parts of the world.

A discovery of great interest to geologists as well as to seekers for wealth has been announced from Arizona. What is said to be the finest marble in the world has just been found near Camp Bowie by L. R. Legier, of Phoenix, who brought to the knowledge of the world in 1881 the big marble deposit in Gunnison county, Colorado. Mr. Legler has been searching Arizona for marble for 15 years. He has found it in small quantities in almost inaccessible localities, on several occasions, but a few days since he came suddenly upon marble ledges of inestimable value right where soldiers of the regular army have camped for 20 years, totally unconscious of the wealth that lay near them. In one place the largest marble ledge is said to be three miles long on the surface and nowhere has it yet been found to be less than 1,000 feet wide. In this vicinity is marble enough of various kinds to supply the world. A large portion is said to be of finer quality than the best Carrara marble. It is fine and close grained. In a deep gorge about a mile from Camp Bowie the marble is black and surpasses that of Ireland, Belgium or Egypt, formerly the only countries where the stone had been found. This ledge is 300 feet wide. For miles stretches a vein of marbles of all colors and a marble mountain rises here, a great mass. Soon after gold was discovered in California the gorge was the scene of one of those terrible tragedies which people of the present day of luxurious travel find it hard to comprehend. David Easton started to accompany the family of his fiancée, Helen Hight, a beautiful girl, 18 years old, in their long journey across country from Ohio to the coast. While passing through the Chiracuhua mountains, the party traveling with them got far in advance of the Hights, who stopped to repair a broken wheel. Suddenly a band of Apaches attacked the little company in the rear and all were at once killed or mortally wounded, except Helen and Easton, who were subjected to the most cruel tortures their tormentors could devise. Easton was finally fastened to a cactus bush in such a position that the sharp needles lacerated his flesh to the bone and doomed to thus witness the end of the girl whom he loved. He finally tore himself loose and rushed to the brink of the precipice, over which Indians were holding the girl. As she fell to the rocks, 1,000 feet below, he attacked the murderers and sent four of them to the same doom, then loosened a boulder which rolled crashing among his pursuers and escaped down a trail, where he was soon afterwards found, wounded and dying, by some of the emigrants who had returned to ascertain the cause of their companions' long delay. The marble mountain forms a massive monument to the sufferers in the tragedy.

"HELEN'S DOOM," WHERE BLACK MARBLE DEPOSIT WAS FOUND.

STONE FOREST, SAN NICOLAS.

There is a mountain of marble near Colton, Cal., where stone for building is quarried. In an excavation at the top large quantities of concrete are manufactured. The Channel Islands, off the Pacific coast, nearly opposite this point, present scenes of great interest to the anthropologist. Of these the best known, of course, is Santa Catalina, a resort of such prominence that everyone has more or less knowledge of its strange caves and grottoes, where the remains of an extinct race may be seen. Heretofore the other islands of this group have been, as a rule, neglected by what is now known as the civilized world. Toward one of these, San Nicolas, public interest is now especially turned, because the University of California is about to begin the most thorough exploration of it ever made. It lies 60 miles off the coast of Santa Barbara and Ventura counties. Strange presences seem to pervade all of these little islands, where peoples of other days and customs lived, worked and loved. On San Clemente are enormous mortars and pestles and indications that the ancient inhabitants were a giant race. San Miguel is chiefly interesting from its topography. Great pillars twist around winding caves and rugged canyons suggest attractions to the explorer. Scientists from the Smithsonian Institution have secured quantities of ornaments and utensils of bone, shell and stone from Santa Cruz. On San Nicolas are most abundant evidences of a people of large stature.

The islands are seldom visited and loom in lonely desolation on the blue ocean. Science has thus far been able to tell us little of the origin and life of these aboriginal settlers and how and why they disappeared so completely. As far in the past as history deals with the islands skeletons by hundreds have been strewn over San Nicolas. Peculiar stone utensils have been found among the skeletons, indicating a civilization which so far has not been comprehended.

In 1825, 15 members of a strange Indian race were known to live here, and Franciscan padres from the Santa Barbara mission made an attempt to rescue them. A sudden storm drove their sloop from the shore when all the Indians were on board but one woman. Its occupants were all lost, as the sloop was cast on the rocks of Point Conception. Traditions existed among the fishermen of a lone woman at the island, and in the fifties a small expedition landed and found her in a costume of colored bird skins eating blubber from a seal, which she conveyed to her mouth with a bone knife. On seeing the men, she smiled, and falling on her knees, prayed to the sun. On arriving at Santa Barbara she prostrated herself in adoration before a man on horseback. Two weeks later she died from the effects of food to which she was not accustomed. This was a great disappointment to scientists, who hoped to learn from her lips the traditions of her race. The Island of San Nicolas is ten miles long and four wide at its widest point. It consists of a nearly level plateau at an elevation of 800 to 1,000 feet. Two-thirds of the surface is covered with drifting sand, the remainder affords excellent pasturage for thousands of sheep. Sheep shearers and shell gatherers are chief among its infrequent visitors. Coral Harbor is the only safe landing place and its entrance is but six or seven yards across. White pelicans in large numbers promenade its strip of beach. Circular depressions are the only marks of ancient dwellings of which none of the materials used in construction remain. Immense shell mounds and bones of fish, seals, whales, sea otters, foxes and birds show that the inhabitants were fond of animal food. The quantity of these proves that the population possessed healthy appetites.

Biologists say that the number of varieties of mollusks in San Nicolas are not exceeded in any region of the same area. From one of the elevations, some 40 miles distant, are visible through the clear atmosphere. On one side of the island is a sparse, petrified stone forest.

English by Creoles.

The intelligent struggles of the Cuban teachers with English have furnished us with a good many pretty stories. One day not long ago the teachers were invited to some sort of an evening function at the Longfellow house on Brattle street. It happened that shortly before the hour for the assembly some ladies who were in front of that house were politely approached by a group of male Cuban teachers, who, with their hats in their hands, stood bowing. "If you please, dear madams," said their spokesman, "we are invited at this house to-night. We wish to attend. We were been on an excursion to the distance, and have not the time to go to our house. So that we wear, as you see, our day dress. Perhaps you can tell us if it would be permitted us to go to the reception in our day dress? If it would not, then certainly shall we take the time to go to our home and put on our night dress." The ladies assured them that they would do much better to go as they were than to put on their night dress, and they bowed gravely and gratefully and withdrew.—Detroit Post.

Isn't it Worth 25c. To Be Cured of Constipation

People who suffer from habitual constipation with all its attendant ills, clogged stomach and bowels, sluggish liver, heartburn, indigestion, and thin and impure blood, are too apt to believe that the only remedy is violent purgatives. The contrary is the case. Such cathartics, even if they do move the bowels, are irritating and gripping, leave the stomach inflamed and enfeebled and the constipated condition recurs with greater difficulty of cure and the sufferer constantly growing worse. There is a laxative that moves the bowels without pain or gripping, cleanses the stomach, sharpens the appetite, stimulates the liver, strengthens the nerves, and purifies the blood, while its marvellous tonic properties tone up the entire system and keep it healthy.

Laxakola Does It

Its remarkable tonic properties reach every organ—the liver, kidneys and stomach, nerve, heart and brain—and removes the cause of your debilitated condition. This is the only way to secure an absolute and permanent cure.

Laxakola is the only medicine for babies, is purely vegetable and its action is gentle, speedy and effective. For coated tongues, simple fevers, colics, chills and languid feeling it is the ideal medicine.

It tastes good. "Children like it and ask for it."

Laxakola, the great tonic laxative, is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz. laxative and tonic, and at one price. No other remedy gives so much for the money. At druggists, 25c. and 50c. or send for free sample to LAXAKOLA CO., 122 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 266 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

Baltimore, Md., March 20, 1900.

Full history of my case, to be used at your discretion. I will now give you about five years ago, my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.

I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulting a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialists of this city, who told me that only one operation could help me, and even that only to temporarily, that the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever.

I then saw your advertisement, suddenly all in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the ringing ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been restored to normal. I thank you heartily and long to remain Very truly yours,

In this age of problems it is hard to discriminate, but there are two upon Two Great Health which all may agree. Just now Problems. they lead, says the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post. The first is, in regard to consumption. Some one has said that it has "killed more people than all the wars and plagues and scourges of history put together." Dr. Biggs, the New York expert, declares that of every four New Yorkers who die between the ages of 15 and 65 one dies of consumption; that there are 20,000 cases in that city constantly, and that the deaths last year numbered more than 9,000. According to a New York newspaper, one specialist asserts that of this country's population 10,000,000 "must inevitably expect to die of consumption." The other problem is to get the small cities of the United States to awake to the importance of sanitation. Nearly all of them do nothing until threatened by an epidemic, and then the zeal is only temporary. To arouse these communities to the importance of constant watchfulness and of preventive measures will be to increase the average of life for the whole nation. We have been dazzled by the outburst of wealth in the new century, but these strivings for health are worth all the dollars that have passed through Wall street.
