SOFT COAL FOR HOGS.

Writer of This Article Considers It an Almost Perfect Preventive of Swine Disease.

My hogs are fed a coal meal daily through the summer, and about all they will eat, which would be surprising to some farmers who never feed it in the amount a hog will eat. Growing pigs and shoats like a ration of coal as regularly as they do of corn, judging from the avidity in which they take to it. In winter do not think it necessary to feed so liberally, yet would fear no harm in supplying them with all they will eat at all times of the year. My herds will average upward of 125 head of all ages for the year, and I calculate that no less number of bushels of coal slack will justify their needs. With a daily supply of coal, fresh water, a balanced ration and good sanitary surroundings, there is little danger of cholera or any other disease affecting them seriously.

A mere handful of coal thrown two or three times a year to your hogs cannot be considered a guard against disease, any more than one or two ordinary meals would induce health to the human system on a restricted kind of food for the same length of time. There is no substance in its natural state that a hog likes which would be harmful if free access is given at all times or at regular intervals. In the mineral impregnation of coal the hog gets a certain element that is known better to his own instinct and composition for the beneficial results through mastication. I may be fooled and meet a surprise some day in the shape of hog cholera in my herd by placing such faith in coal, but for the present I will make it the "battle guard" against swine disease in all its forms until convinced of its inefficiency.—J. E. Haynes, in Swine Breeders' Journal.

WARM HOUSE FOR HOGS.

Farmers Can Make No More Profitable Use of Straw Than by Building One of Them.

Straw may be put to many uses, and shelter and feed may be partly combined, where used for cattle. Fine quarters may be made for hogs, but runways should be provided for light and exercise. As a warm nest for a cold winter night's sleep, the straw hog house shown is O. K. Build a shed

STRAW STACK HOGHOUSE.

20 or 40 feet long, about five feet high and six feet wide. It can be made of poles or other strong material. Posts should be as close as eight feet apart, so as to support the weight of the straw. Board up the front, which should face the south, and leave an opening in the middle large enough for hogs to pass through; also a space along the top for light and ventilation about five inches wide. Then cover the top so the straw will not fall through while stacking it on. Leave the north side or back of shed open until the straw is put on, and build that side up with straw. Start the stack 12 or 15 feet wide, just back of shed, and build straight up until it is level with top of shed. The ends should be brought up in the same way if one has plenty of straw. Then cover all with straw and finish as though the stack had been started all on the ground. The hogs rubbing against the stack will soon increase their quarters and furnish them with plenty of bedding.—J. R. Stephenson, in Farm and Home.

INTERIOR OF STRAW HOGHOUSE.

Feeding Value of Apples.

The experience of careful farmers indicates that apples are worth more for feeding than the usual cider mill price, says Farm and Home. A Massachusetts dairyman who had a lot of low-grade apples began on a large old cow, which was nearly dry, feeding her in connection with her summer pasture exclusively two quarts of hard Greenings and Baldwins at night and the same quantity in the morning, gradually increasing, until at the end of a week she was eating about one bushel per day. Her milk increased from four to six quarts per day. Where there are short pastures and the necessity of giving cows some extra food inferior grade apples may be turned to profitable account.

Effect of Fermented Manure.

Fermented manure gives good results, as it contains more soluble matter than that which is not decomposed. Corn sometimes fails because the manure does not have time to decompose in the soil before the plants mature, and the corn looks yellow because there is an insufficient amount of available nitrogen in the soil. Later in the season the crop may show a green tinge, but it is then too late. With the manure in proper condition when the seed is put in the crop secures a good start.

Stop the Blight!

It is a sad thing to see fine fruit trees spoiled by the blight. You can always tell them from the rest. They never do well afterwards but stay small and sickly.

It is worse to see a blight strike children. Good health is the natural right of children. But some of them don't get their rights. While the rest grow big and strong one stays small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion can stop that blight. There is no reason why such a child should stay small. Scott's Emulsion is a medicine with lots of strength in it—the kind of strength that makes things grow.

Scott's Emulsion makes children grow, makes them eat, makes them sleep, makes them play. Give the weak child a chance. Scott's Emulsion will make it catch up with the rest.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson in the International Series for January 12, 1902.—The Promise of Power Fulfilled.

[Prepared by H. C. Leighton.]
THE LESSON TEXT.
(Acts 2:1-11.)

1 And when they were all together in one place,
2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.
3 And there appeared unto them tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.
4 And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.
5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.
6 Now when this was noted abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.
7 And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, How hear we them speak in our tongues, when we hear them speak in our tongues, wherein we have heard them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.
8 And they were all amazed, saying one to another, What can this mean?
9 And they began to say one another, How hear we them speak in our tongues, when we hear them speak in our tongues, wherein we have heard them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.
10 And they were all amazed, saying one to another, What can this mean?
11 And they began to say one another, How hear we them speak in our tongues, when we hear them speak in our tongues, wherein we have heard them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The promise is unto you and to your children.—Acts 2:39.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The lesson should include not only the text as printed above, but also on through the 35th verse. Read also Joel 2:21-32. This takes in a part of Peter's wonderful sermon. The text in the Acts may be summed up under the following heads:

The gift of the Spirit, vs. 14.
Effect on city's multitudes, vs. 1-12.
Prophecy fulfilled, vs. 14, 17.
Jesus the Christ, vs. 22-36.

The Gift of the Spirit.—Pentecost was the fiftieth day after the Passover and one of the three great feasts of the Jews. It has been remarked that a Jewish tradition made Pentecost the anniversary of the giving of the law from Mount Sinai. It may well have been that upon the anniversary of the revelation that marked the beginning of the Old Testament dispensation, the gift of the Holy Spirit should mark the beginning of a new dispensation. No longer is it the old Mosaic law, but the love of Christ, that constraineth us.

It is to be noted that the descent of the Spirit was made manifest in three significant symbols. In the Bible the Spirit is likened to three things without which life would be impossible on earth: air (or wind), fire and water. The first two of these are mentioned in our text. The Spirit is like the wind because it is invisible and powerful, yet gentle and delicate. It is like the breath of life of all things living. It is like fire in that it is purifying and gives comfort and light. Fire worship is one of the religions of the east, being considered the source of all life. Water is not mentioned in the passage, but the gift of the "spirit" is further symbolized in the power "to speak with other tongues," representing the chief method of spreading the truths of the Gospel and its universality. All peoples are to hear it, all peoples, of whatever nationality, of whatever age, of whatever experiences, can understand it, each in their own tongue.

Effect on the City's Multitudes.—Such great power became immediately manifest not only among the few, but among the many. Strangers in Jerusalem from far-away nations were surprised to hear themselves addressed in their own language. The Jews, not understanding any but their own language and seeing the commotion caused among the foreigners as well as their own people, accused the apostles of being drunk with wine.

Peter's Sermon.—The charge of drunkenness was out of all keeping with the facts of the case. Drunkenness stood then as it stands now for licentiousness. The descent of the Holy Spirit meant directly the opposite; for it came not upon the self-indulgent, but upon those who submitted themselves to the Divine law of love. The Bible speaks of men possessed of demons; mania; they were, defying all law, human or Divine. So we have come now to speak of those upon whom the Spirit of Christ has come as "possessed" of the Holy Spirit. Demoniaes and Christians (using both terms in their strict and derivative as opposed to their acquired meanings) are at the very opposite spiritual extremes. Peter became the spokesman of the followers of Jesus and explained to the multitude that had gathered how the phenomenon was the fulfilling of the prophecies all the Jews had long accepted as messages from God, and that it was another proof of the Messiahship of the Jesus they had crucified.

The prophecy quoted by Peter was that of Joel, and the quotation included Joel 2:28-32. The literal fulfillment of this prophecy Peter pointed out. Joel's words of promise and comfort should be read and read by Christian people, for we see in these days even as Peter saw on Pentecost the wonderful apostrophe, "Fear not, O land, be glad and rejoice: for the Lord will do great things."

Doing His Best to Prevent It.

"Do you realize," said the gambler, "that there is a heavy surplus in the United States treasury?"
"Well," answered "some" in St. Louis, "it ain't my fault."—Washington Post.

World Aid to Their Power.

"Compressed air is rapidly coming into favor as a motive power?"
"Yes. Some of the point and power form orators should try it."—Boston Herald.

When Time Is on the Move.

Harris—What time is it?
"Indorsing."—Brooklyn Live.
