The wife of Geo. Brown near Hoffer seems to be the only bad case of small pox in the county now. Mr. Brown's mother has a slight attack and a girl living with her is sick, but it is not known whether it is small pox or sickness from vaccination.

There seems to have been a little truth connected with the anonymous letter received from Selinsgrove about a picture agent having been in the small pox region, but why did not the writer sign his name.

GOTHAM'S NEW MAYOR.

Both Low is a Man of General Information and Wonderful Executive Ability.

Seth Low is a man of medium height and powerful build. His every move is suggestive of great energy and force. His ambition is without limit. Apparently he has much of life before him. He was born in Brooklyn, January 18, 1850. He graduated from the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. This institution of learning had not then a collegiate course, and at the age of 17 years Seth Low entered Columbia university. In 1870 he graduated at the head of his class. He then entered the big tea and silk house conducted by his father. He rose from clerk to member of the firm in 1875. Four years later he succeeded with other junior partners to the business, which was finally liquidated in 1888.

In the meantime Mr. Low had been active in public life. He became conspicuous in politics and charitable work. In 1876 he was a volunteer visitor of the poor. In 1878 he organized and became president of the first bureau of charities. He affiliated with the republican organization in his ward. In 1882 Mr. Low was elected mayor of Brooklyn for a two-year term. In 1884 he was re-elected.

On October 7, 1889, less than 20 years from the time of his graduation from the institution, Mr. Low was elected president of Columbia. He did much for the university. He found time for municipal affairs, too. He was a member of the rapid transit commission and the Greater New York charter commission. Four years ago President Low was a candidate for mayor of New York, but was defeated by Robert Van Wyck, Tammany's candidate.

In politics New York's new mayor has pursued an independent course. In 1884 it was charged that he voted for Cleveland. This charge has been denied. President Low, however, was in sympathy with many of Cleveland's views, and in 1888 he openly opposed the republican national ticket. In 1896 and in 1900 he supported McKinley.

HONORING A NURSE.

Memorial Erected in Her Honor by the Survivors of the Second New Hampshire Regiment.

The story of Miss Harriet P. Dame, the famous army nurse, has been recalled by the recent marking of her grave in Blossom Hill cemetery, Concord, N. H. The memorial was erected by "her boys," the survivors of the Second New Hampshire regiment, of the war of the rebellion, and subscriptions came from old soldiers throughout the country. Many of the donors had been tenderly nursed by Miss Dame and remembered her as their ministering angel.

The monument which has just been dedicated is diamond-shaped and of white stone, the white diamond being the famous symbol of the old Third corps, with which Miss Dame served. Upon the die is the inscription: "Harriet P. Dame, 1815-1900. Army nurse, 1861-1865. Erected by the survivors of her regiment, the 2d New Hampshire Volunteers, 1901." Upon the reverse side is "Third corps, Army of the Potomac."

At the close of the civil war Miss Dame accepted a place in the treasury department, Washington, and lived in that city until the year of her death.

A Mania for Moth Balls.
A fad for eating and inhaling the odors of moth balls was discovered recently among the young lady students of Lawrence university. No less than 30 of the so-called, it is found upon investigation are victims of the habit.

At first the odors of naphthalene were simply inhaled, but the abnormal taste has developed of late to such an extent that two of the girls confessed that they actually ate the drugged insect destroyers.

WON IN THE CLOUDS

Pretty Romance of a Girl Astronomer in Paris, France.

Venerable Admirer Proposed to White Both Were Viewing Venus from a Balloon and Was Made Happy.

Miss Dorothee Klumpke, a San Francisco girl and the greatest woman astronomer in the world, is the central figure in a most remarkable love romance, writes a Paris correspondent. She was wooed and won while in the clouds. While was up in the balloon making photographs of the stars her scientific colleague seized the occasion to propose and was accepted.

The happy man is Dr. Isaac Roberts, a famous English astronomer who is 72 years of age. He is the head of the observatory at Croborough, in Sussex county, England. He writes the letters S. D. F. S., F. R. A. S., F. G. S. after his name. Miss Klumpke and Dr. Roberts first met at the astrophotographic congress in 1887. He was deeply impressed by the excellence of her photographs of the heavens. He himself was engaged in this kind of work in England and he was much impressed by the superiority of his feminine rival in France. He began an exchange of photographs with her—photographs of the heavens, of course.

He learned to admire her, not only as an astronomer, but as a woman. Gradually a courtship began in the picturesque Paris observatory, when Miss Klumpke holds a very important position. He pursued it whenever the interests of science permitted. Science he found was all to exacting. There was hardly a moment when the fair young astronomer was not engrossingly absorbed by her duties. Miss Klumpke's special duties consist in observing and recording the stars in the Paris belt. She is one of the most accomplished photographers of stars. In her pursuit of this work she has been accustomed to go up in a balloon. She is an absolutely fearless aeronaut.

Dr. Roberts accompanied her in several of these balloon ascents as a humble admirer and acquirer of knowledge. It was on one of these ascents that he at last found time to propose.

Parisian friends and admirers of Miss Klumpke thus described the scene: It was a gorgeous night, with a myriad of stars shining clearly in the heavens. Below were the twinkling lights of Paris faintly indicating the outlines of houses and buildings. The balloon was sailing through the pure and silent upper air. The charming astronomer, her evening's work done, lingered with her hand on the telescope to meditate and enjoy the beauty of the scene.

It was the psychological moment. She was gently aroused from her reverie by the pleading of her learned companion. She remembered his worth and his devotion. He won his cause. Hereafter the two astronomers will share their study of the stars.

It is a significant fact that Venus was the star which Miss Klumpke was chiefly observing when this romance occurred. The superstitious will immediately draw their conclusions from that. The moon was also photographed, but whether that had any influence one would hardly venture to say.

In spite of her profound scientific attainments Miss Klumpke is of pleasing appearance and dresses quite tastefully. She won her place in the Paris astronomical observation over the heads of the 50 Frenchmen who were competing, and she now has charge of the department which computes the measurements of the stars in the Paris belt, with several young Frenchwomen under her direction. She has a special bureau of her own in the great observatory garden, and it is covered with ivy and surrounded by flowers. Here Mrs. Klumpke works eagerly from nine in the morning until five in the afternoon, and at night she stays up in the round tower with her telescope turned searchingly upon the stars or goes up in a balloon to study them better. She delights in it, and the heavens to her are as intimate as the little garden of her bureau, where the snails crawl over the paths and the French roses bloom.

Spiders Tap Telegraph Wires.
The Argentine Republic has been obliged to put the telegraph line between Rosario and Buenos Ayres underground, because on wet days the electric current was dissipated through the numerous spider webs attached to the wires.
