There is a direct connection between the comfort of the cow and the cash received by her owner. This factor of comfort may be made more important by having combined with it the additional factor of succulent feed. This is especially the case when cows are on pasture, in which case their digestive systems have adapted themselves to the succulent nature of the foods. In case of a storm lasting for days, or of any mishap that makes it necessary to take the animals off the pasture, the substitution for that pasture grass of dry hay always causes loss in the flow of milk and in the production of KEEP YOUR BLOOD GLEAN butter fat. Every dairyman should have on hand silage, sugar beets, or some other succulent feed to help out the pasture whenever necessary. The importance of this is shown by an experience at the Arizona experiment station, as told by the director: The 17th, 18th and 19th days of November, 1900, were rainy days. From the day before to the day after the rains the amount of milk delivered at the creameries fell off ten per cent. In the same time the milk from our own herd decreased 37 per cent., and continued to decrease until it had reached 50 per cent. It then took the cows a month to get back to where they were before the rain. The week of the storm and that following, two of the six cows had sugar beets in addition to their pasture. During these two weeks the interesting lecture the other evening four cows having pasture alone fell off 46 per cent. in amount of butter fat given, while the two having beets "Nothing, only Wiggleton failed in fell off only 20 per cent. Here is to be noted not only the effect of the storm, but the effect of feed as well; the cows having sugar beets during the storm falling off less than half as much in their butter fat as did those on pasture alone.

Pride's Olga Embodies Most of the Good Points Required of the Typical Dairy Cow.

At the recent stock show at the Pan-American exposition there was a very large exhibit of aged Jersey Cows. Some of the finest cattle in the country were brought in competition for the prizes, says New England Homestead. First prize was awarded to Pride's Olga, IV. (96,807), owned by Charles A. Sweet.

She is a remarkable animal and embodies most of the good points required for a typical cow of her class, as shown in the illustration. She is large and solid, of a dark fawn color, with an enormous, well-formed and perfectly balanced udder, large tortuous milk veins, great barrels, elim neck, disk face, incurving horns and keen but gentle eyes.

As a two-year-old, she gave 2421% pounds of milk and made 15 pounds two ounces of butter in seven days. Just before entering the contest at the Pan-American she made for one day a milk record of 65% pounds. seven days, 447 pounds two ounces, and in 31 days, 1,941 pounds 14 ounces; in 113 days, 6,359 pounds. Previous to her last calf, May 10, she gave 12,000 pounds of milk in 11 months. Pride's Olga's IV. was born August 2, 1893. She was sired by Melia Ann's Stoke Pogis (23,042). Her dam was Pride's Olga (37,186), who has six tested daughters and another to be tested soon.

Cows Thrive on Ensilage, I have fed ensilage for four years with good success, and have never seen any bad effects of using it. In the meantime I have gained a very large business over non-feeders. I feed daily from 30 pounds to all that will be eaten per cow. I have also fed oat and pea silage. There are not many silos around here, but farmers have been watching mine, and have made up their minds that silos are just the thing. I am feeding now about 50 head of cattle, and would say that for me "no silo, no dairy."-George L. Franz, in Farm-

No Money in Poor Cows.

The poor farmer sticks to the poor cow and imagines that he is making money out of her. Fortunately for that kind of a cow, the said kind of farmer has a strong imagination-one that does not have to have facts to build upon. If the farmer got to demanding proofs of the value of his poor cow, it would be the end of the cow. It is a pity that more farmers are not of a judicial turn of mind. If about half of the cows of the country were turned into cow beef it would be better for the farmers.- Farmers' Review.

COLONEL KEPT VOW.

How Gen. Wilson Cured a Bibulous Fellow Officer.

Charming Story Told About the Gal lant Soldier Who Will Represeat the Army at King Edward's Coronation.

When the late Charles A. Dana was essistant secretary of war he was commissioned to go to the front and, in semiofficial letters, to give his impressions of the officers of Grant's army for the purpose of assisting President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton in forming their judgment of military

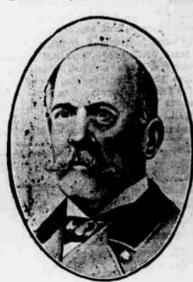

Of Gen. James H. Wilson, one of the commissioners appointed by President Roosevelt to represent the United States at the coronation of King Edward, Mr. Dana wrote, under date of Cairo, Ill., July 13, 1863:

Lieut. Col. Wilson, inspector general, is a captain of engineers in the regular army, and has rendered valuable services in that capacity. . . . He has remarkable tal-ents and uncommon executive power, and be heard from hereafter. "Gen. Wilson abundantly fulfilled that prediction," said Brig. Gen. John F. Weston, commissary general of the army. "I had the honor," continued Gen. Weston, "to serve on Gen. Wilson's staff during his famous cavalry campaign. In the opinion of his men and in the estimate of Grant himself, Gen. Wilson was a remarkably brilliant soldier. Gen. Wilson was very young when made a cavalry commander. In fact, he was but 27 years of age when he assisted in the final triumphs of the war." An officer in the war department at Washington, in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, tells of an incident in which the youth and the still more youthful appearance of Gen. Wilson during the civil war almost led a distinguished colonel to send in his resignation. "It is an interesting bit of unwritten history," said the officer who relates the story.

"Shortly after Grant had put Gen. Wilson in charge of a large force of cavalry and while his brilliant exploits were being heralded throughout the country, Col. - was transferred from the army of the Potomac and assigned to duty under Gen. Wilson. The colonel knew a number of Wilson's officers personally and was popular horse. "You'd make a fierce-looking among them. He was a stern and brave | villain, wouldn't you?" soldier on the battlefield, but in social hours was something of a Bohemian. On the night of his arrival at Gen. Wilson's camp the general was temporarily absent and the colonel and his old friends celebrated their reunion.

"The next morning the colonel went to the general's headquarters to report for duty. It was in August, and the general, in white duck, entirely divested of military emblems, was keeping cool in a hammock where he was diligently studying a topographical map. Somehow the colonel, who had never met Wilson, got it into his head that this youth was a newspaper correspondent and, so believing, he did not heritate to address him familiarly, saying that he had arrived only the night before and had, he feared, tarried too long at the wassail bowl.

'I understand,' added the colonel that Gen. Wilson is very strict about that sort of thing.'

"'The general,' replied Gen. Wilson. suppressing his amusement over the colonel's unwitting confession, 'seeks to impress his officers with the necessity of keeping their faculties clear for possible emergencies at any hour.'

"'Do you think,' persisted the hapless colonel, that my appearance would betray me?"

"'Only to the practiced eye,' responded the general, 'but I should advise you to walk around a little while before reporting.'

"The colonel took his advice and after awhile returned. When he discovered that the youth he had seen in the hammock was in reality the dashing cavalry leader, the colonel was in a worse condition than he had been the night before, but the general put him at his case after exacting a pledge that he would not drink again, except on a physician's order, while the war lasted."

The vow was rigidly kept.

The question has been asked, "In what way are Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets superior to pills? Our answer is: They are easier and more pleasant to take, more mild and gentle in effect and more reliable as they can always be depended upon. Then they cleanse and invigorate the stomach and leave the bowels in a natural condition, while pills are more harsh in effect and their use is often followed by constipation.
