Dyspepsia AND Liver Disease CURED BY DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

...was weak, nervous and dizzy, with a faint sensation when walking," writes Jesse Childress, Esq., of Summit, Sullivan Co., Tenn. "Could not walk any distance; always felt bad after eating; felt as though something was sticking in my throat, always uneasiness in stomach. Doctored with three physicians but they did not relieve me. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I have taken seven bottles of this now and am as well as ever, and enjoying health as much as ever before. I worked all summer and this winter as much as any one. My case was liver disease and nervous dyspepsia of which your medicine has cured me. In September 1897 my weight was about 95 pounds, now it is 125. Please accept my sincere thanks."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson for June 22, 1902—Temperance Lesson.

THE LESSON TEXT.

(Romans 13:8-14)

8. Owe no man anything, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9. For this, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

10. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

11. And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

12. The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.

13. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.

14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.—Rom. 13:12.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The People Addressed.—Paul's Epistle to the Romans is his most elaborate work. It is a thorough setting forth of the Christian religion, as he understood it, arranged in the order of experience. It begins with a discussion of the ways in which God reveals himself through nature and through the law. But all men have sinned and need redemption through faith in Christ. Such faith leads to peace, to freedom from the law and from bondage to sin. It is God's gift to men, and those who believe have come to be grateful that they have been led by God to believe, through the spoken word which the apostles preach. Paul had never seen most of the people to whom he was writing, though chapter 16 shows that he had a good many friends in Rome. The church in Rome was made up partly of Jews, and partly of Gentiles. It probably was quite large, having different assembling places, but being really one in administration. There were great differences of opinion, however, both in doctrine and in practice, and Paul wrote in the hope of making these differences less. Our lesson is from the section on practical duties, which includes chapters 12-15. The virtues on which Paul dwells are sincerity, kindness, honesty, purity and brotherly love, and the manifestations of them which he advises are those which indicate forgetfulness of self and mindfulness of God and our fellow men.

A newspaper writer of Cleveland has discovered in a government crop bulletin what he regards as the true reason for the pre-eminence of the sons of Ohio in the affairs of the nation. It seems that Ohio leads the states of the union in the extent of its onion industry, both as to acreage and actual crop. The careless observer might pass this fact by as of no great importance, but not so the newspaper writer of Cleveland. He points out that this is a vindication both of Ohio and of the onion, placing the fame of each upon a secure basis. The method of reasoning is exquisite. It has long been held that the onion possesses extraordinary qualities. Everybody knows that. It has been alleged to be good for the blood, good for the digestion; in short, a sort of natural curative and restorer. These are no longer allegations, hypotheses. They are demonstrated by the product of the onion, viz: the healthy son of Ohio. This is one side of the argument. Here is the other side. It has long been maintained that the Ohio native represented the best of self-reliant Americanism. Hitherto there has been nothing to prove this, except his ability to get office and hold it. But now it is established. Of course, he is all he claims to be, for is he not the greatest producer, and, presumably, consumer, of onions in the country?

"Brevity is the soul of wit," and of everything else, too, in these days, especially in the newspaper line. A beginner in newspaper work in a southern town who occasionally "sent stuff" to one of the New York dailies picked up last summer what seemed to him a "big story." Hurrying to the telegraph office he "queried" the telegraph editor: "Column story on so and so. Shall I send?" The reply was brief and prompt, but to the enthusiast unsatisfactory. "Send 600 words," was all it said. "Can't be told in less than 1,200," he wired back. Before long the reply came: "Story of creation of world told in 600. Try it."

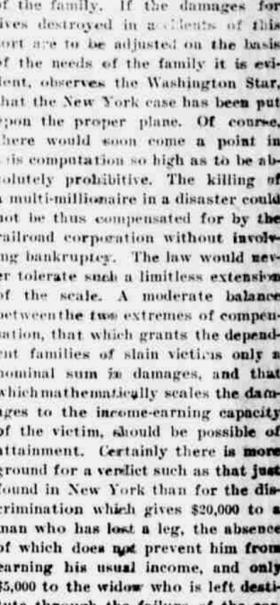

The president of a widely-known corporation says that small economies are as necessary to-day as they ever were, but they must be scientific economies. "The days of saving wrapping twine are gone; the time is here for seeing that not a penny-weight more iron than is necessary should go out in slag."

A bunko steerer who once had a fortune of $700,000 died in a poorhouse the other day. At some time in his life, says the Chicago Record-Herald, he must have tackled the wrong farmer.

It is not quite clear why several acres of ground should be set aside for the aerial race course at St. Louis. The common impression is that airship races take place in the air.

One of the suits brought against the New York Central railroad for damages resulting from the tunnel collision of the past winter has just been concluded in the court of the first instance, a jury granting a widow $60,000 damages for the death of her husband. This is an unusual sum to be allowed by legal processes for the loss of a human life. Ordinarily the limit of $3,000 is fixed, notwithstanding the apparent discrepancy of granting higher sums to maimed survivors of accidents. In this case the plaintiff was left with three children and based her claim upon the fact that her husband had previously supported her and them and that the railroad company should replace him in a financial sense. At $60,000, invested at 5 per cent, the family income would be $3,000, probably comparable with the earnings of the head of the family in life. On the other hand, $5,000 similarly invested would bring in only $250, palpably an insufficient substitute for the services of the supporter of the family. If the damages for life destroyed in accidents of this sort are to be adjusted on the basis of the needs of the family it is evident, observes the Washington Star, that the New York case has been put upon the proper plane. Of course, there would soon come a point in this computation so high as to be absolutely prohibitive. The killing of a multi-millionaire in a disaster could not be thus compensated for by the railroad corporation without involving bankruptcy. The law would never tolerate such a limitless extension of the scale. A moderate balance between the two extremes of compensation, that which grants the dependent families of slain victims only a nominal sum in damages, and that which mathematically scales the damages to the income-earning capacity of the victim, should be possible of attainment. Certainly there is more ground for a verdict such as that just found in New York than for the discrimination which gives $20,000 to a man who has lost a leg, the absence of which does not prevent him from earning his usual income, and only $5,000 to the widow who is left destitute through the failure of the corporation to provide sufficiently against accidents.

Care of Sheep in Winter.

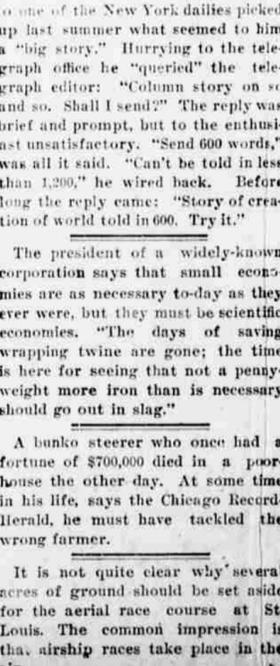

The best quality of wool cannot be grown on sheep that are alternately highly fed and half starved and frozen. One of the principal essentials in growing the finest wool is regularity of condition. This will give an even, healthy growth of wool, without break or flaw, and which give the best results in manufacture with the least waste. Whenever a sheep is allowed to get out of condition and then is fed up again, there will be a weak place in the fiber at the point where the poor condition ends and improvement begins. In manufacturing, the wool often breaks at this point, causing more or less waste. This weak place is very easily detected by trying the strength of a lock of wool from several fleeces. Care should be taken to keep the sheep, especially during the winter, in a uniformly thrifty condition.—St. Louis Republic.

Treatment for Stagnation.

This trouble is caused by a deranged state of the nervous system, the result of something the horse has eaten. Mix an ounce of aloes, half an ounce ginger and half an ounce bicarbonate of soda; dissolve in half a pint of hot water, then add half a pint of cold water and give at one dose. After the physic operates, mix four ounces sulphate of iron, four ounces nitrate of potassium and two ounces turpentine; divide into 24 doses and give one dose a day in bran mash until the bowels repeat the above if necessary.

TROUGHS FOR SHEEP.

How to Put Old Eave Troughs to Good Use Without Going to a Cent of Expense.

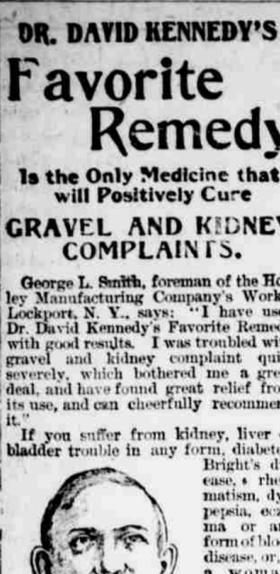

Old eave troughs may be easily made into feeding troughs for sheep in the manner shown in the illustration.

There is scarcely a farmer who has not several troughs rotting away behind some of his buildings, each of which might be put to good use with only ten minutes' work.—Harry Knowles, in Orange Judd Farmer.

The Tail of the Horse.
To cause hair to grow in the tail of a horse moisten the tail with castile soap and water, and next day shampoo it out with hot water, soap and sal soda, and afterward moisten it well with one dram of bichloride of mercury and formaldehyde and one quart of water. The mercury should be dissolved in alcohol before mixing with the water.
