How a New York Grocer's Daughter Became a German Princess and Afterward the Wife of Field Marshal Von Waldersee.

Mary Lee, the American girl, the trict stickler for the observance of the Sabbath-the devout church member -the Sunday school-teacher-the Paris art student, the friend of the young Princess von Schleswig-Holstein-the wife of the young princess' father-the charming widow-the wife of Count von Waldersee-the friend of Prince Bismarck, the great diplomatthe one American woman who can claim the attention and the "ear" of Kaiser Wilhelm.

This, says the New York World, is in brief the life record of the woman who is to visit us soon in company with her husband, Count von Waldersee, who commanded the allied armies in China.

At 62 she has been termed the "woman Roosevelt." She is a believer in the "strenuous life."

A widow with immense wealth at hercommand, she chose a husband-at first a pawn, now a gallant knightwhom she could move forward along the chessboard of life. That she has made her moves wisely may be judged by the fact that Count you Waldersee is now one of the most trusted and most prominent officers in the entire

German empire. Through the influence of his wife, Mary Lee, he arose, it is said, to the command of the first division of the German army. Through his wife he was appointed to the chief command of the allied armies in China.
