THE GREAT MONUMENT.

The Hieroglyphic Stairway Found at Copan, Honduras.

Finest Specimen of Aboriginal American Architecture in Existence—Its Beauty is a Puzzle to Archaeologists.

The remarkable hieroglyphic stairway at Copan, in Honduras, not far from the boundary of Guatemala, is in many ways the most important and interesting monument of aboriginal American architecture that has ever been brought to light by the excavations of the archaeologist. Ten years ago it was practically unknown, but since then it has been uncovered and studied as a whole by the various Copan expeditions of the Peabody museum of American archaeology and ethnology at Harvard, under the direction of George B. Gordon, whose elaborate report on the discovery and restoration of the stairway—just issued to subscribers by the museum authorities—affords much incidental information concerning a memorable prehistoric civilization that may prove to be older than even the Assyrian or the Egyptian—that of the ancient Maya people which once dwelt in the plains and valleys of Central America.

How many hundreds—or thousands—of years old the hieroglyphic stairway really is, even the archaeologist hardly ventures to guess. It is a principal feature of the ruined acropolis of what is known to be one of the most ancient cities on the American continent, the annals of which, however, were no more than a shadowy legend even when the Spaniards came to Mexico; and in spite of the fact that the steps of the stairway carry, graven in a series of picture characters or hieroglyphs, what is apparently some kind of a continuous chronological record, these "glyphs" are still, for the most part, quite undecipherable, and the record which they contain is as yet little more than an archaeological puzzle—though to solve it might

AN EFFECTIVE COOP.

How to Build a Safe and Comfortable Shelter Suitable for Chicks the Year Around.

The hen is confined while the chicks run free. During the day the screen door is left slightly ajar for the exit of the chicks, while the wooden door is brought forward to a level, resting on the upper edge of the screen, holding it in place and serving as a shade, or to prevent sudden showers from beating into the coop. At night the screen door is tightly closed, and in cold, stormy weather the wood shutter is also closed. The roof of the coops is of matched boards with a moderate back slope, but a ready-made box may be used, covering the level top with tough building paper, which must then be painted. This is a cheap, safe and comfortable shelter.—Sally Fisher in Farm and Home.

Coronation Date Fixed.

London, July 12.—It was officially stated yesterday that the coronation of King Edward will take place between August 8 and August 12. There will be no royal procession as originally planned, except that in which the males will proceed from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey and return. It is now considered practically certain, in view of this announcement that King Edward will be crowned Saturday, August 9, since the holding of the coronation ceremony Monday, August 11, would involve another full bank holiday with the attendant disruption of general business, while Saturdays are almost universally observed as half holidays.

ABORIGINAL SCULPTURE.
(Rare Work of Art Discovered at Copan, in Central America.)

well mean the opening up of a chapter of history as romantic as it is mysterious.

At one end of the main structure of Copan, as the acropolis of the city is called, a broad pyramid, which at one time was crowned by some public building—a temple or palace—rises to a height of about 85 feet. On the western slope of this pyramid is the hieroglyphic stairway, originally affording access from a square or plaza below to the temple above and a system of terraced courts beyond. At some time in the past, however, a landslide swept away the symmetry of two large faces of the pyramid and brought down the upper steps of the great staircase in an almost impenetrable mass of debris which completely buried the lower stairs, so that when Mr. Gordon first visited Copan the whole plan of the stairway was entirely obliterated, and the pyramid itself was little more than an overgrown mound of earth and broken stones.

Four entire seasons were required to bring something like order out of this chaos. From 50 to 100 laborers were at one time constantly employed, and the fragments which were removed covered an acre of ground. Every important fragment was carefully molded, and the molds shipped to Cambridge in order that some day a restoration of the whole staircase may be made and set up in the Peabody museum. Only 15 of the 40 or 50 upper steps which went down in the landslide retained in any degree their identity or their relative positions, however.
