LUCID LOCAL LAONICS

Latest thing in door latches is the key. It is advisable to pick a quarrel that is ripe. It doesn't require a skilled workman to pick a lock. It isn't money if it is the time of a pig. You can't have what you like try what you have. A man who is on the level ought to go along smoothly. It is the staff of life, but some prefer the roll of fame. The young men find it easier to get than to get furniture. It is not that slyly licks the cream all about the lap of luxury. A widower who goes to court a time moves for a new trial. A party may drive some men to but it keeps more away from it. A man who preaches economy really expects his wife to do all the living. A wife is called the better half and the husband who usually does the better. The Gilbert's Sunday school will their annual picnic on Aug. 23 in the field's grove. The 2500 counties in the United States, Snyder is one of the very few that does not have an annual county fair. The Centreville Cornet Band stopped on Saturday, while enroute for the fair, and rendered several choice selections. The bank has paid its cost twenty cents. It was bought for $7,200,000, has supplied $150,000,000 in furs, and gold. Statistics compiled by officers of the county order show that its membership has had a net increase of 40,540 during the last year. The total membership now is 881,531. A. E. Soles in his new saw- and air cutting parlor for your cleaned with a refreshing shampoo and a clean towel to each patron on the north side of Market square opposite Central Hotel. Satisfaction guaranteed. Saturday Chairman Joseph G. Leshner to the County Seat to register the candidates. The following registered as candidates for Commissioners:—Joseph Marks, Middleburg; Jno. C. Thomson, Selingsgrove; H. A. Klingler, Freestown; H. M. Derk, Kratzerville; W. M. Miller, Beavertown; C. W. Knights, Trevorton. Over 175 classes recited daily last session in the Normal Department of the Mlersville Normal School. Recreation hour found students playing baseball, tennis, boating on the lake, promading on the grounds, sitting in the shade of the great forest trees and enjoying themselves in other ways. The merchant who does not patronize his home paper has no occasion to look if every farmer in the country buys his supplies direct from the city. The truth of the matter is, not seeing our advertisement in the home paper they think you have gone out of business or don't want their trade. That the honey bee sting is a sure cure for rheumatism has been demonstrated at Shady Grove. One of its prominent citizens by reason of this disease was unable to hoe in the garden, but in helping to hive a swarm of honey bees he was stung in the arm and the sting as well as the rheumatism pains disappeared and now he can hoe corn with anyone.

The Middleburg Cornet Band participated at the encke-walk and festival at New Berlin on Saturday evening. The Swann property offered at public sale last Saturday was purchased by the Swann Bros. Consideration $1350. A. G. Scholl, of Millintown, appeared before the Borough Council Monday evening and made a proposition for the lighting of the borough by electric lights. No action was taken by the Council, but it will be considered at their next meeting. On Monday evening a large number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Yerger to celebrate the 19th anniversary of the birth of their daughter, Miss Sue. Refreshments were served and at a late hour all left for their respective homes wishing their hostess many happy returns. The manager of a well known proprietary medicine firm says that in one month when he advertised heavily the profits were $30,000. The next month he spent less than one-third as much for advertising, and the profits fell to $2700. "The decrease in advertising," he says "was registered on sales as quickly as an icy wind on a thermometer." Who says advertising don't pay. Rain, rain, go away, and don't come back for many a day. The earth is soaked, the streams are high and not a thing in sight is dry. The prospect-makes the farmers frown. His oats are lodged, his grass is down, his meadow's underneath a flood, his cornfield is a field of mud. In town the merchant's gum and blue, because of patrons scant and few. He looks for trade and looks in vain, and sadly mutters: "Too much rain." The Central Pennsylvania College, located at New Berlin, Pa. Albright College, located at Myerstown, Pa. have been consolidated under the charter of Albright College and the institutions at New Berlin will be discontinued after the close of this term. All communications intended for what is now Central Pa. College, after July 1, 1902, should be sent to Pres. J. D. Woodring, Myerstown, Pa. The alumni of both institutions will be consolidated into one association and the Excelsior and Neocosmian Literary Societies of Central Pa. College will be transferred and become the literary societies of the consolidated institution. A. E. GOBBLE, Pres. The Maurer Pioneers. In the graveyard at New Berlin are headstones marking the resting-places of these persons: Frederick Maurer, born in 1767, in Goschoppen, Montgomery Co., Pa., died in 1834. Catherine Maurer, wife of Frederick Maurer born in Northampton Co. in 1779; died in 1858. Andrew Maurer, born in New Goschoppen, Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, Pa., in 1772; died in 1829. Hannah Maurer, his wife, born in 1772; died in 1827. Jacob Maurer, born in Goschoppen, Pa.; died in 1827, aged 66 years. He was one of the first Trustees of the German Reformed church at New Berlin.

The Unmarked Graves of the Stocks. In a bleak little field in Middlebrook township midway between the villages of Kremer and Globe Mills, lie, it is alleged by competent information, the bones of those of the Stock family who met a cruel death by the tomahawk in 1781. One hundred and twenty one years have passed by since that massacre was perpetrated, and but few people live in the vicinity today who can point out, from reliable information transmitted by former generations, the precise spot where rest the bones of those pioneers. In the long ago, some thoughtful hands, spurred by the sacred memory which invests such a tragedy with the romances of history, sought to permanently mark and identify the graves of the Stocks, by placing there, local shafts of stone gathered from the nearby hills. These remained in position for many years—long enough at any rate to satisfy men of fifty or a hundred years ago—that the spot would not be lost to future knowledge. Some twenty years ago a change of ownership in the soil obliterated all traces of the graves, the markers fell before the plow and the harrow and this once well known "grave-yard" has since been a cultivated field. The original site of the old Stock homestead can be fixed at this day by a rude excavation in the earth, it being the site of the stock house. Generations have come and gone and those who live near there today say they remember in the earth in the past national number of the house which in a twinkling of time was desolated by the Indian hand. During his lifetime Matthias Inaberman one of the best known and among the oldest of the residents of the neighborhood, frequently resorted in speaking accurate language, the first information of the bloody tragedy which Matthias Schoch the original proprietor brought in the early morning to the Dauberman homestead, due east but a few hundred rods from the Stock cabin, to which place Mr. Schoch rushed hatless and with gun in hand and breaking into the door in his excitement summoned Mr. Dauberman's grandfather to assistance saying "Komme geholnt so schnell die Indianer haben die Stocken erschlagen." Mr. Dauberman said he often heard his grandfather detail the circumstances of the assault and the words were fixed upon his youthful memory. The Stocks have scattered to the points of the compass, the land which placed a head-stone only to be ruthlessly battered down by a plow-share has long since returned to ashes, the witnesses of yesterday's generation are dead and the grim tragedy is a circumstance in tradition which appeals with stirring force for something more enduring than a fleeting oral speech for restoration and identification of the last resting place of the murdered first settlers. Five people, all told were killed by the Indian and their remains repose in that quiet unknown spot. The Conrad Weiser Chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution would perhaps interest itself in a project to mark suitably and permanently the Stock graves, for there is a growing opinion that a popular subscription to reach that end be soon undertaken.—Snyder Co. Tribune.

Ghost at Lewistown. Lewistown is wrought up to a high pitch of excitement by strange lights which flit nightly between the old and new Episcopal cemeteries. Superstitious persons believe them to be warnings of some impending calamity. There are residents who declare that similar lights were seen just prior to the flood of 1880, and the smallpox epidemic of 1894. Mrs. Shoemaker, an aged resident, was returning to her home after spending the evening with a neighbor, when nearing a vault in the old cemetery, she was startled at seeing a brilliant red light leave the vault, move slowly across the street directly in front of her and lose itself in the new cemetery. Badly frightened, she made rapid strides for home, but had taken only a few steps when she again saw the same light some distance away on a hill. This time it was waved up and down in much the same manner as trainmen give signals. Then it disappeared. Before she was half way home Mrs. Shoemaker fell and rolled into the gutter. When regaining her feet and senses she saw the same light apparently hanging in the middle of the street, only a few feet from her. Almost frantic—she ran screaming to the house of a neighbor, where she recounted her experience. Thinking she was the victim of a malicious "hoax" prankster friends prevailed upon her to remain at home. Thursday morning the lights were again seen and before dawn several instances occurred and during the same. This appearance of the phantom lights—colored sometimes near the cemetery, in some, for the lights are never really extinguished by a supernatural power, as the phenomenon is usually reported what they had assembled for the following night the same stories were witnessed by hundreds of persons who had gathered from all parts of the town, but before any attempt could be made to capture the lights would vanish, and their source remain a mystery. Although no traces of phosphoric minerals are known to exist in the vicinity of the cemetery and other prominent citizens say they have seen these lights at various times, and that all former residents of the town are disappointed and disappointed.
