

Men as Well as Men
Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, distresses and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.
Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. The child writes, "When the child scalds the flesh when the child is afflicted with difficultly is kidney trouble, and the first should be towards the treatment of the important organs. This unpleasant is due to a diseased condition of the and bladder and not to a habit as people suppose.
Men as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, both need the same great remedy, and the immediate effect of Root is soon realized. It is sold in fifty-cent

SCRAPER FOR STABLES.

For Cleaning Up Floors and Other Work of the Kind This Device is Very Convenient.

A convenient device for use about the stable for cleaning up the floors, etc., is shown in the illustration. Provide a thin, stiff piece of iron about 14 inches long and 5 or 6 inches wide, and cut it with a cold chisel

SCRAPER FOR STABLE USE.

into the shape shown, or leave it rectangular. Rivet the handle socket of an old garden hoe to the blade, and put in a handle of the desired length. A scraper of this kind is much better than one made of wood, and it will be found useful outside the stable for such work as cleaning the barn floor, the poultry house, or for use in the grain bins. If a handle clip from a hoe is not at hand, the device shown by "B" may be available of to attach the handle to scraper. This is made by taking a piece of strap iron, bending double, welding part way up and spreading apart the unwelded wings, which are bent so as to fit on the squared end of the handle. Small holes are drilled in the clip of the rivets or bolts with which it is secured to the scraper blade and handle.—J. G. Allshouse, in Ohio Farmer.

EXERCISE FOR HORSES.

An Important Element in the Development of the Highest Powers of an Animal.

In writing about the care of horses an eminent English army officer has the following to say: "Regularity of exercise is an important element in the development of the highest powers of the horse. The horse in regular work will suffer less in his legs than another, for he becomes gradually and thoroughly accustomed to what it required of him. The whole living machine accommodates itself to the regular demands on it, the body becomes active and well conditioned without superfluous fat, and the muscles and tendons gradually develop. Horses in regular work are also nearly exempt from the many accidents which arise from over-freshness. As a proof of the value of regular exercise, we need only refer to the stage coach horse of former days.
Many of these animals, though by no means of the best physical frame, would trot with a heavy load behind them for eight hours at the rate of ten miles an hour without turning a hair, and this work they would continue to do for years without even being sick or sorry. Few gentlemen can say as much for their carriage horses.
No horses, in fact, were in harder condition. On the other hand, if exercise be neglected, even for a few days, in a horse in high condition, he will put on fat. He has been taking daily the large amount of material needed to sustain the consumption caused by his work. If that work cease suddenly, nature will, notwithstanding, continue to supply the new material; and fat, followed by plethora, and frequently by disease, will be the speedy consequence."

BUYING HOGS CHEAP.

Many Otherwise Sensible Farmers Allow Low Prices to Dictate Important Purchases.

No swine breeder can afford to buy animals just because they are cheap.
It not infrequently happens that the cheapest animals prove to be the most expensive in the end, whether that end be in the way of breeding or of butchering. If an animal is cheap it is because it is not worth much, except in rare cases when a good animal has to be disposed of under the conditions of a forced sale. The man that buys a cheap boar finds that he has to sell the progeny of that boar at a correspondingly low price. The man that buys a cheap sow frequently finds that she is cheap because she bears few pigs and they of poor quality. By the time he has disposed of the pigs and figured up his accounts he finds that the cheap sow was really a very expensive sow, for into her went not only the purchase money but a great deal of labor and feed. No progressive man will allow the price to dictate his purchases.
Quality is what he must have, and it is what he is after. The man that really buys cheap is the man that pays a good price for a good animal and gets a good profit out of it. It is very seldom that a good profit comes out of a poor price and a poor animal.—Farmers' Review.

Inoculation for Blackleg.

Blackleg attacks fat cattle under two years of age. It may appear at any season of the year, but commonly in spring and fall. They should be inoculated when about four months old and again when about one year old.
The vaccination seems only to protect about one year. It can be done at time of year convenient to the owner, and on any part of the animal, generally in ear, tail or neck. All animals dying with this disease should be burned.
The first thing detected is the animal is lame, refuses to eat, a swelling appears on shoulder or hip. Generally the animal dies in a few hours, and on cutting into the swelling it has the appearance of the tissues being poudded.

ELECTION PROCLAMATION

FRIEND OF FARMERS

Mr. Newell, Chief Hydrographer of Geological Survey.

Author of the Great Scheme of Arid Land Reclamation in the West, Recently Indorsed by the Congress.

It seems odd that the man who is chiefly responsible for the great scheme of irrigation in the vast arid regions of the west should have learned his earliest lessons in irrigation in Massachusetts.

The man to whom, more than to anyone else, is due the credit for mapping out this great and expensive plan of reclamation is Frederick H. Newell, chief hydrographer of the United States geological survey, who, though born in Bradford, Pa., is descended from old New England stock, and was himself brought up on a Bay state farm, after taking a course of engineering instruction at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

His father before him was a civil engineer, and it is a curious circumstance that his grandfather, Armemus Newell, who once conducted a farm about 12 miles from Boston, was the first man north of Mexico and California, to introduce a practical system of irrigation.

This sturdy New England son of the soil during the early part of President Buchanan's administration had occasion to make a trip to southern France, and there had his eyes opened to the value of irrigation as a means of rendering fruitful otherwise unproductive wastes of sandy land.

Mr. Newell's interest in this system appears to have been transmitted to his son and grandson, for the latter, from the time he first set eyes on the original irrigation plant on the old Newell homestead, became an enthusiast.

By the time he was six, as a result of his boyish studies of the

FREDERICK H. NEWELL, Chief Hydrographer United States Geological Survey.)

Newell plant, he had mastered practically every detail of irrigation and could run the plant, with its ditches and sluice gates, about as well as his grandfather could.

After receiving the rudiments of his education at Needham, Mass., young Newell took a course in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and after graduation went to Colorado in 1882 to engage in mining.

Subsequently he entered the geological survey, where he proceeded to make a specialty of irrigation, and no man was more proud and delighted than was he when the last congress indorsed his ideas by making an appropriation of some $5,000-000 or $6,000,000 for the purpose of beginning this great work.

A recent statement by Mr. Newell, in the Boston Globe, concerning his course as a member of the geological survey, contains an important lesson for young men.

"When I first entered the service of the geological survey," said Mr.
Newell, "I saw that there was very little chance for any one to forge ahead unless he originated something altogether new and aside from the general line of work as it was then carried on by the survey.

"Every department was filled by some person well advanced in years who had originated and built up his own particular line of work, and I determined, therefore, to turn my knowledge of irrigation to account.
Running my eye over the map of the west, I saw whole states and sections of states, arid, unsettled and unfit for habitation.

"Unless something was done to convert these barren and arid tracts into fruitful and habitable lands, many of these territories could never gain populations large enough to become states, but would continue for all time to remain territories.

"I, therefore, inaugurated and developed plans for a complete hydro-graphic survey of the west, to ascertain the practicability of irrigation in those parts. This survey is still in progress, and has proven a complete success."

The areas in which the various regions to be treated on this vast scale extend from Canada to Mexico and from the Missouri river to the Pacific, and the work of survey has only just begun.

The reclaimed lands are to be sold to settlers, not more than 160 acres being allowed to one person, and in this way the work will soon be made practically self-supporting, the revenue derived from the first lands reclaimed being utilized to irrigate another section.
