THE LESSON TEXT.

1. Therefore, my brethien, dearly be-loved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved. 2. I beseach Eucdias, and beseach Syn-tyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord.

3. And I entreat thee, also, true yokefellow, help those women which labored with me in the Gospel, with Clement, also, and with other my fellow-laborers, whose names are in the book of life. 4. Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again

I say, rejoice, 5. Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand, all men. The Lord is at hand.

5. Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.
6. Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with tranksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.
7. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.
8. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good relovely, whatsoever things are of go port; If there be any virtue, athings, be any praise, think on these things, things which ye have both

9. Those things, which ye have both carned, and received, and heard, and seen do; and the God of peace shall be with you. 10, But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.

11. Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content.

12. I know both how to be abashed, and I know how to abound: everywhere and in all hings I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer

I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Rejoice in the Lord

niwny.-Phil. 4:4. ANALYSIS OF SCRIPTURE SECTION.

PLACE.-Rome. An Uplifting Message,-Bear in mind that the epistle to the Philippians was written during Paul's imprisonment at Rome, and yet note how cheery and inspiring it is! There is nothing in it to show that the apostle is downcast. Indeed, he declares that the things that have happened unto him have turned out to be for the progress of the Gospel (1;12). He hopes that he will be delivered, but is ready to die; and for his own sake alone, that he would be glad to do, for then he would be with Christ (1:21-23). Paul had a special affection for the Philippian church, and his love is plainly evidenced in this letter. It should be read, all of it, at one sitting. Last Sunday the lesson was the story of the end of Paul's work in Philippi. This simple personal letter from the apostle, now perhaps nearing the end of his life, to his old friends at Philippi, was written from a Roman prison, and apparently after Paul's affairs had taken a decided turn for the worse, 1.c is still cheerful and hopes for release and to see his friends again, but his cause for hope and joy is not in his circumstances, but in the fact that he is superior to them. The crisis which should mean life or death to him was near (1:20-24). He was ready for either. He promises to send Timothy to them "forthwith, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me." Kead the whole letter and more than once if possible, and let the courage and contentment and humility and affectionateness of the man whose life is revealed in it teach their own lessons.

"Wherefore:" Referring to what he has just said. Paul is counseling his friends from his own experience to let their faith in future glory be an inspiration to every-day living. "Euodia . . Syntyche:" Two women, both of them Christians ("whose names are in the Book of Life"), and yet who were hurting the cause by their un-pleasant disagreement. "True yoke-fellow:" There has been much discussion as to who was meant, but probably the word translated yokefellow was the name of one of the Philippian disciples, and we should read, "I beseech thee also, Synzygus (yokefellow), rightly so named (true)."

"Rejoice in the Lord:" This letter comes from Paul's own life experiences. His advice has been tested and tried. If we are to rejoice always we must look from the small facts of life to the great ones,-and the greatest is God and His love. "The Lord is at hand:" The reference is to an early reappearance of Christ on earth, which seems to have been generally looked for by the Christians. "In nothing be anxious:" The distressing anxiety of those who are depending entirely upon themselves. The Christian may take all his troubles and cares to God, and so find the "peace of God." "Whatsoever things are true, . . . think on these things:" Take account of them, let the mind dwell on them, learn to appreciate them wherever they are found, and then, Paul goes on to say, "these things do."

"Revived your thought:" They had wanted to send Paul aid before but had lacked opportunity. In the next verses Paul speaks of the secret of Christian contentment. He had learned how to abound and how to be in want, and both with a thankful heart: but the strength which enabled him to do the hard things was his only as a result of his vital poion with Christ Jesus his Lord.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS. Only one who has a clear trust in the Lord can be anxious for nothing. As one thinketh so is he; therefore think of whatsoever things are true, honorable, just, pure, etc. Learn the great secret of being content. Do not let your happiness depend upon outward circumstances.

A still more flagrant failure to "spot" a universally known composition is now reported from Newton Center, Mass., according to the New York Post. A certain Arthur Farwell, of that suburb, composed a musical setting for the familiar "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes." In due course of time it was published in sheet music form. Now there chanced to live in western New York a woman who had retired from the operatic stage that she might devote her declining years to the manufacture of phonographic records, which means singing vociferously into the horn of a phonograph the popular melodies of the day. She chanced to see a copy of the song it question, and apparently liked it, for an early mail train bore eastward a letter addressed to Mr. Ben Johnson, Newton Center, Mass. "Dear Sir," it said, "For 85 1 will include your song, 'Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," in my new catalogue of phonograph records, and will also send you a record of the same." It is only fair to append the composer's reply: "Dear Madame: As Johnson was a with us at the present time, in any case he would not sanction this expenditure of a sum which might be so much more satisfactority applied at the Mermaid Tavern.
