THE SUNDAY SCHOOL. Lesson for February 1, 1903—Paul at Athens.

THE LESSON TEXT. (Acts 17:16-34.) 22. Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

23. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you.

24. God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that He is the Lord of Heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; 25. Neither is He worshiped with men's hands, as though He needed any thing, seeing He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26. And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; 27. That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him, though He be not far from every one of us;

28. For in Him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also His offspring. 29. Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead be like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device;

30. And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent. 31. Because He hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance by the dead.

32. And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked; and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. 33. So Paul departed from among them.

34. Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. An idolatrous city.—Athens was an intellectual city, priding itself upon its culture and refinement. Here Socrates, and after him his pupils, Plato and Aristotle, held their illustrious schools. It was the home of art. In its sculptures and paintings it stood unrivaled. Especially it far surpassed all other cities in its devotion to the gods. Paul was now to ascertain what reception the city would give to the true and only God.

Though Paul had not meant to begin missionary work in Athens, the university city of the ancient world, he could not keep still, and preached in the synagogue on the Jewish Sabbath and discoursed in the market place every day.

This went on for some days or weeks,—we do not know how long—till it was decided to have Paul before the Areopagus court, and see what that body thought of his teaching, and whether it was advisable to authorize him to continue as one of the recognized lecturers. Paul was not on trial before the Areopagus, but only his teaching. For the consideration of such cases as this, the court did not meet at that solemn and awful spot at the top of the Hill of Mars (Areopagus), but in the market place, the center of educational Athens.

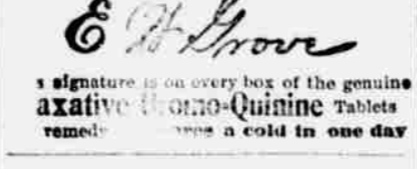

Thus called upon by the learned court, and surrounded by a great crowd of the students and others who frequented the market place—curious, unsympathetic most of them, and expecting from the stranger little but an hour's diversion, and perhaps a bit of fun—Paul seized the opportunity to preach the Gospel of Jesus with consummate skill and power. "Very Religious": Paul was too much of a gentleman to begin before that body of learned men by saying, "You are too superstitious." "Objects of your worship": Notice that there are two elements in the audience—the scholars, and the crowd of common people who had gathered around them in the market place. The statues and altars were not objects of worship to the scholars, one of whose prominent teachings was that belief in the old gods was pure superstition and only for the ignorant. "To an Unknown God": This altar was set up to make sure that no god was omitted.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood. All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work. Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries. It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Our collection of misers has been running low for some time. All summer we had misers "to burn," so to speak, but the fall crop has been rather light. It is all the more pleasant to hear of a saving woman in York, Pa. She lived in the poorest kind of poverty; she hid her money, as every miser worthy of the name does, and she left $30,000, says the New York Sun, to mitigate the grief of her relatives. She was happy in laying up and they will be happy in spending. By the happiness they give themselves and prepare for others, misers, niggards, churls and curmudgeons, as the superficial and rash judging call them, add much to the sum of felicity.

A St. Louis jury awarded a woman $15,000 damages for the loss of her beauty. Still, $15,000 worth of beauty is much more than most women in any part of the country carry around with them.

Quite Affectionate. The following is an extremely affectionate epistle addressed to an Irish maiden: "I'm yours to command, both in weepin' and laughter; I'm awake all the night, that of you I may dream; I'd hang meself now if you'd marry me afther; And though I may change I'll be ever the same."

At Odd Times. The Doctor—And did you take your medicine as I told you? The Patient—Oh, I took it at odd times. "At odd times? Why, I told you to take it every two hours!" "Yes, I took it at three, five and seven o'clock."—Yonkers Statesman.

A man, a day or so ago, was seen to approach a crowd of young men loafing in front of one of the shops in — street, to whom he made the remark: "What are you doing?" "Oh, just killing time," answered one of them. This is a very common expression, and a very forcible one, but its meaning is something fearful. It is the young man who, generally speaking, does the killing of time, for in advanced age it is all too late to make amends. Time that has been killed can never be resurrected. "Killing time" literally expresses a fact, and when so killed is as dead, to all intents and purposes, as though it had been a living body. Napoleon Bonaparte once said that he won his battles because his enemies did not know the value of five minutes. So it is with everyone. There is no battle of life that cannot be won if due regard is had for the five minutes a day. With the multiplication of books, and the simplification of the elementary principles in every art or profession, an minutes a day of diligence and application will, sooner or later, mean the mastery of the art or profession. The young man who deliberately kills time commits a crime against himself and nature's laws. The quota of time meted out to everyone has no surplus moments, and he who can successfully weave the whole of life's fabric in the given time has done well.

Sweden has begun to emancipate itself from slavery to coal. The government has decided to operate by electricity 2,200 miles of railway which it owns. The electricity will be generated by water-power, which is abundant in that mountainous country. Some time ago Italy also began to utilize its waters for producing electricity, and was expecting an industrial revolution in consequence of the supply of cheap power for manufacturing purposes. This country does not monopolize all the electricity in the world.

South American republics should not forget that there are two sides to the Monroe doctrine. It affords protection and at the same time imposes obligations. Because our policy avers the acquisition by European monarchies, it does not release them from the obligations of courtesy and good behavior toward the other nations of the world.
