BE DECENT ABOUT IT.

If You Kill Hogs on the Farm Do It in a Way That Is Neither Cruel Nor Demoralizing.

The season for hog killing will soon be present on every farm, and then we shall see repeated the usual cruel, heartrending scenes of man's thoughtless inhumanity. Three or four men and boys, and perhaps a yelping dog, will lay siege to the doomed animal, and with much ado will catch and throw the beast, which meantime rears the air with his squealing as though crying lustily for mercy; and when at last the knife has been driven home and the arteries severed, all at once the quietness of death prevails, the hog arises, totters about awhile, ghastly blood pouring from the wound, the animal gets weaker and weaker and finally tumbles over and gives his last dying kick. The man's wife and children, and perhaps some of the children of the neighborhood, have been silent but horrified witnesses of the direful scene. Now is this not a delightful picture to present for the inspection of women and children? And is it not ennobling to all who witness it? If there could be a greater exhibition of man's apparent cruelty to animals, and one that is more likely to create a feeling in the young of disregard for things that are gentle and kindly, I do not know where to look for it. True; swine must be slaughtered; but let it be done in decency. When a lad I witnessed swine killing at an abattoir, and I regarded the method so wicked that I never forgot it, but really it was no worse than this. The animals were in a close pen. Three men did the work. One with a hog hook would catch an animal under the jaw, an assistant would help him raise the head up, and the third would do the sticking, when the hog was dragged to a chute and tumbled down it, kicking and bleeding. A merciful way to kill a hog is to strike it in the head with a suitable implement, producing stupor, then instantly use the sticking knife. This causes instant death. An animal suffers more from fear than it does from death itself. A neat, unobjectionable method is to drop the open side of a suitable long, narrow box down over the animal and then turn the box and animal upside down, when the knife can do its work and the box be righted again that the hog can bleed properly. Humane men will be apt to pursue one of these better methods; indeed, many of them do now; but if they will not, they should be thoughtful enough to have children absent from hog killing, that no evil be done by bad example.—Progressive Farmer.

ABOUT SEED POTATOES.

When Placed in the Ground and Covered with Earth and Straw They Keep Well. American Gardening tells how some have kept their potatoes intended for seed. Selecting them when digging, they store them in a dry shed or barn until the weather gets cold. About the middle of November they sort them, rejecting all that show signs of decay. They then spread a layer of straw eight or ten inches thick upon the ground, and place the potatoes on this. The best results are from mounds about three feet wide at the base and rising like a cone to about the same height. This is covered with straw and then by a layer of soil from six to eight inches thick. Before the weather gets too severe more soil may be added, and when the ground is frozen, put on more straw or strawy manure. They seem to winter much better than in cellars or when put in mounds or pits as soon as dry. We would say that we think it would not injure the germination of the sprouts if the tubers were frozen solidly in such a mound, if they were not disturbed until they had thawed out in the earth in the darkness. We have plowed out potatoes in the spring that had lain within six inches of the surface of the ground all winter, where the ground had been frozen two or three feet deep, and they were apparently as sound and fresh as those dug in the

SUGAR CURED HAMS.

Method of Salting and Smoking Which Has Been Tried with Success for Years.

At a recent meeting of a farmers' institute the subject discussed was the best method of curing and keeping hams. All members agreed that the quality of the meat depended in a great measure upon the kind of hogs and the way they were cared for. Much better meat is obtained from the purebred than the common scrub. In order to be perfectly healthy they need plenty of range, with as great variety of feed as possible, and plenty of fresh clear water. They should be killed in cold frosty weather, and after scalding and cleaning, hung up to cool over night. Several methods of salting and smoking were presented, but the following, which was given by a farmer who, after years of experience, has gained the reputation of having the best sugar-cured hams in the county, was accepted as the most satisfactory:

Cut the meat up in the morning and shape the hams nicely. Salt lightly to bring out the blood, and allow it to remain a day or two. Prepare a brine, using two pounds of salt, two ounces of saltpeter, two pounds of brown sugar, one ounce of red pepper and five gallons of water for each 100 pounds of meat. Let this brine, which should be strong enough to float an egg, stand until the ingredients have dissolved, then place the hams in a tight barrel and pour the brine over them until they are covered. After ten days pour the brine off and cover with fresh brine prepared as the first was. When they have been in the brine a month, take them out, wipe them with a dry cloth, and while still damp sprinkle powdered borax over them, using a tablespoonful to ten pounds of meat. A large pepper box is a great help in applying it. Hang them up and smoke with hickory chips two or three weeks. Slip each ham into a flour sack, tie the ends securely, and hang them up in a cool dry place until you wish to use them. The preservative qualities of borax are recognized by all who have tried it, and it is now used in all the large packing houses. The best meat is made of hogs weighing 180 to 200 pounds. It has long been a question among progressive farmers as to whether it paid to produce hogs weighing over 300 pounds, and we are quite certain that when the object is to obtain meat of a superior quality it does not.—Rural New Yorker.

COMPLETE TOOL BOX.

No Farmer Who Believes in Keeping Up House or Barn Can Do Without One.

Here is a sketch of a handy tool box that ought to be on every farm: Take a box 4 1/2 feet long, 3 feet wide, 12 inches deep; knock one side out and stand on end; make a shelf about 15 inches deep in the top part to keep saws, squares and planes; make a deep door, hinged at top instead at the bottom; make eight partition drawers 6 inches wide and 6 inches deep to keep different sizes of rivets, buckles, nails, screw taps, bolts, etc.; then make two drawers, 12 inches deep, to keep hammers, hatchet, chisels and auger bits.—Perry McClain, in Epitomist.

SENSIBLE FARM NOTES.

There still remains much land that can be rendered more valuable than it is now by thorough drainage.

Hard, clayey soils should be turned up to the air in the fall so that the frost can have a chance to work on them during the winter.

Drain tile should not be laid above the frost line, especially if it be unglazed tile. The hard frosts will pulverize it. Many a ditch has had to be re-dug on this account.

It is difficult to keep books on the farm, but it must be done if the farmer is to know where he stands and whether or not he is making anything by his farm operations. Farming must be conducted on the same basis as any other business. The sooner the farmers realize this the sooner will some of them be saved from going the downward road to bankruptcy.—Farmers' Review.

A Hint from the Gypsies.

The gypsies, who devote their time to horses and horse trading, are experts in taking an animal that is in poor flesh and getting him in good condition in a short time. One of these gentlemen gives the following as his favorite ration used for this purpose: Mix a bushel of flaxseed with a like amount of barley and corn and grind them together. These proportions can be increased or decreased to meet the necessities of any particular case. This mixture is to be fed three times a day, after being mixed with a peck of chopped hay or straw. Commence with giving him a small amount at first, gradually increasing it, until he is fed all he will eat. It is recommended as being much better than any drug treatment for young or old horses.—Farmers' Voice.

Subriety is, and of right ought to be, a necessary qualification for service on a jury. Prohibitionists would doubtless hold that a jury of total abstainers is the ideal. Such a jury, however, would be out of the question for the complicated and difficult case which has arisen in court No. 1 of Philadelphia. The question at issue is whether or not a certain shipment of whisky has a "queer" taste. If the jury finds that it has this peculiar flavor, the distiller who sold it will have violated the terms of the bargain which required him to furnish whisky of a grade satisfactory to customers. After the jury had listened to the testimony of experts, who declared it very bad, indeed, the distiller's counsel raised the point that an issue involving so large an amount as $125,22 should not be decided on the word of men who were whisky-drinkers, and necessarily more or less irresponsible. This was perplexing. The only thing left was for the jury-men to sip in a judicial manner at the subject-matter of the litigation.

Protection Against Weevils. After cleaning beans and peas ready for use, take a tight box, barrel or cask (dry) and put the peas or beans in it. Take a small bottle and put into it two ounces of naphthalide of carbon. Put the bottle into the peas while it is corked up. Press the seeds about the bottle some so it will not tip over. Then take out the cork and cover the receptacle in which the peas or beans are. This covering should be so perfect that the fumes of the gas will not get out. Do not unseal it for some time, nor carry a lamp or candle near it, as the gas from it might take fire.—D. C. Prosser, in Farmers' Review.

The Pigs That Pay Best. Young pigs that can be raised to 200 pounds in six or seven months are one of the most profitable things raised on a farm. In order to have them attain the growth several things must be in mind. The pigs must come from good mothers, and it is well to get the litter the second or third time she has had. Spring pigs are better for they will take on more weight in six months than fall pigs. They must be steady. When they reach maturity and show increasing signs of lagging in putting on weight send them to market. For food, give them skim milk, good clover in season, and roots and grain enough to produce rapid growth.—Midland Farmer.

The statement that 532 tons of cigarettes were exported from Egypt in 1901 suggests the thought that in the time of Moses and Pharaoh the world was spared such afflictions as this. Then the plagues of Egypt were kept at home. Before the use of drainage tile was thoroughly understood two-inch and three-inch tile were quite generally used. To-day four-inch tile is considered as small as should be used in any case.
