Boston Church Conducts a Pawnshop for the Poor.

Four Per Cent. a Year Is the Rate of Interest Charged-Bright Young Woman Manages the Unique Business.

In the heart of the exclusive Back that's Bay of Boston, under the very eaves doctors call them, of aristocratic Trinity church, a little pawnshop flourishes, remarkable not it undoubtedly is the cheapest in the world, the only one conducted by a the continued church and the only one that is run solely on a philanthropic basis.

Four per cent, a year is its rate, so aulsion. For the cheap that every other pawnshop in the city and in the world, in fact, would feeling of weakness they be plunged into bankruptey if run on a similar plan.

One can raise money on anything, It makes new flesh and from a tool to a jewel, at Trinity Chapel pawnshop.

The sexton at the chapel door said: "Yes, they do lend money here," and he pointed out a little room in the rear Scott's Emulsion gets of the church, where the money is lent and jewels received.

It is a plain, uncarpeted, bare little room, big enough to hold a small bookcase, a desk, a chair and a settee, and very few people at a time. Miss Mitchell, the lady in charge, sat behind the desk, a book before her.

"Yes, we loan money," said Miss Mitchell to a woman who had just entered offering the usual hard luck

She was away from home, her money spent, and in need of a dollar or two till the next remittance came. Miss Mitchell sympathized.

"I would like to raise the money on this ring," said the woman, slipping off an opal ring. (She couldn't say pawn in a church.)

"How much is it worth?" "About $12." she said.

"How much do you want to get on

"I can get along with $3," she replied. Miss Mitchell took the ring. With scarcely a glance at it, she opened her pocketbook and taking out a two-dollar

"With only four cents interest on a an of a dollar for a whole year, I shouldn't think it would pay to keep this place," said a visitor. "It doesn't." Miss Mitchellanswered.

"Though I am very busy here, and especially so on Saturdays, when many ome to redeem their pledges, the profits barely pay my salary, but then it's a philanthropic, not a money-making scheme."

The business originated during an extremely hard winter a number of years ago, when there was great suffering among Boston's poor. It was the idea of several of the prominent members of Trinity church, who advanced the money to open and carry on the business until it might be self-sup-

"Persone who come here are almost invariably those who have known better days. Our own poor of the parish we care for in a secret way, and we also provide coal for many who are not of our parish and who, though in actual need, are too proud to ask it of the city, even when they get down to their last shovelful.

"This, however, is for persons not so badly off as the others, or only temporarily inconvenienced, perhaps, who are sick, out of work, or hard up just for the time being, who have something which they can and which they are glad as well to be able to offer as security.

"We scarcely ever give more than $10 as a loan on any one object," said Miss Mitchell, "though in times past we have.

"We used to advance money on salaries quite a good deal, but now only do it infrequently. If a person is real ly deserving, can furnish good recommendations and will pay some of the loan back from week to week, money is advanced on their salary, but, as I have said, we do not do much in this line now." Like all places of the kind, it has its drawer full of unclaimed articles, but the number is small compared with that of the shops where as much interest is charged for weeks as in the Trinity pawnshop for a year.

course. It is intended to advance the efficiency and earning capacity of those who teach during the Winter, and also to prepare for teaching. The entire course covers four years, all of which can be taken by teachers without interruption of their work in the school-room, and leads up to a permanent certificate and other advantages. This meets a long felt want of teachers who must earn their education with meagre salaries and offers excellent opportunities for steady advancement. Teachers and those who wish to prepare successfully for teaching should not fail to acquaint themselves fully with the benefits to be derived from this course. This year the term begins April 6, 1903, and closes July 29, 1903. Expenses
