FAST RAILROAD TALKERS.

Well About Swift Rides on the Rull and "Hit It Up" at a Great Bate.

A group of railroad men in New Orleans were talking about the fastest rides they ever experienced, says the Times-Democrat. One man in relating his experiences, said: "Across bayous and through marshes we rushed like mad. When we reached the Rigolets the most remarkable thing I ever saw took place. The train was traveling so fast it sucked the water up behind it as it rushed across the trestle, and I could hear the fishes groan as we flew over this neck of the gulf. Most remarkable thing I ever sew in the way of fast runs." And he lapsed into silence, "I am glad you reminded me of that " said another member of the group. "I bad forgotten the incident, l can youch for all you say, for I was on the back end of the last coach. and the water which was sucked in behind the train by the vacuum almost washed me overboard, but I held on all right, and when we made the crossing and the waters had receded, I picked up on the platform of the rear count fortant test bunch of the fish you heard groaning."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

God's promise to Paul that he should witness for Him in Rome was kept. As our lesson shows, the apostle considered that he was there to witness for Christ more than he was to defend himself. Though a prieoper, he preached the Gospel effectively. He did not allow his bonds to hinder him, but made even them help him (Phil. 1:12, 13). He illustrated the truth of the proverb; "Where there is a way,"

The enforces say of three months on the island, ! Melita gave Paul a chance which he could never have had otherwise to preach the Gospel. and his life of humble service for others must have preached quite as much as his words. The word barbarians meant simply people who did

The shawl was trailing behind her as she ran to her papa, and, sobling, threw herself into his arms.

"Oh, papa, she didn't mean it-mamma didn't mean for you to go away and never come back! Won't you come to her new, please, papa?"

Norton, brushing his silk hat, felt once more moved to laughter-perhaps not the laughter of a merely humorous appreciation, but still laughter. Taught by his late experience, he moderated his laugh to a hardly audible chuckle, and then, as that excited no fresh outbreak on the part of Connie's papa, he spoke up.

"Yes, Connic"-he had caught the Httle one's name-"papa's going home. But you mustn't eatch cold, little girl. Here!"

He was taking off his own overcoat to throw over the child when her futher, still sitting in the snow hugging her to his penjacket, looked up and caught him in the act.

Connis looked up at him over her papa's shoulder. "Ain't you got-nobody at all?"

"Nobody at all, Connie. l'ere, let me see if the coat's too long for you." Her papa rose and gathered up the trailing black shawl. "Run on home, baby," he said, wrapping it tight about her. "Run on now, just as fast as you can, and tell mamma I'm coming right sway-soon as I get through talking to this gentleman on business."

Norton took something out of his pocket, stooped, and transferred the something to Connie's hand, whispering to her, and she, after one puzzled stare, disappeared up the street. He looked after her a moment, and then, turning away with a chuckle, said: out I was. Come on, McCorkle; I'm go-Ing to put off that swim with the ice cakes until to-morrow night. Ugh! It surely is a good deal more comfortable with this coat on. Hope I didn't seriously hurt your arms just now."

The two late combatants began to plod together through the snow in the roadway. "New, see here, McCorkle, I'm putting off my plunge just for one thing-just to write a check to your order. You agree to take that check and use it? You won't? All right, then. Good night." He turned back and began to unbutton his cost again.
