The Editor has received papers from Huntingdon, Pa., and Cumberland, Md., where Indian Bill exhibited last week and very rarely indeed have we seen such liberal announcements and such flattering reports of any show. They have 16 cars. At Huntingdon 3000 people witnessed the show. There are no side shows, pink lemonade vendors and out throat fakirs traveling with Indian Bill. This is not a paid advertisement, but we publish this for the benefit of our readers who do not want to miss a clean show.

FROCKS FOR STREET WEAR.

Trig and Simple Costumes. Elaborate Creations. Variety in Sashes and Girdles.

The moderately well-gowned woman of to-day needs two or three frocks to every one she would have needed ten years ago. Fashion has become more arbitrary, and feminine ideas have

And yet, the trig and simple trotting costume will not do for all street wear. Beyond the province of Mill-mades, stretches an interminable vista of more ambitious frocks adapted to various occasions and includes the most elaborately lace-trimmed and exquisite creations which mistily hold with dainty grace, showing a bewildering array of frills and ruffles and subscribing faithfully to the eternal fitness of things in occasional glimpses of her Gordon-dyed, lace-inserted hose.

Now, as to these same fur-belows—in other words, petticoats—look out for a good supply; a change in petticoats and smaller details often constitutes a pleasing variety of toilet. Pompadour silks mark the correct height in elegance in petticoats, and among the more serviceable ones for general wear, none excels the serosis, which has the new Paquin interlining, making them effective asdroskirts with any costume. In my illustration, one is shown grown more extravagant. One must have a tailored morning, or walking frock, severe and smart as to model, preferably one of wooltex construction and finished with a binding at the hem; for example, the one on the left in my illustration, the effectiveness of which is greatly enhanced by being worn with a Forsythe waist of white linen, hand-embroidered, showing worked eyelets in conjunction with solid embroidery.

beneath a gown of Mohair Sicillienne. With it is worn a smart Forsythe shirt waist of Scotch Madras, having stiff cuffs and pearl button fastenings—pearl buttons being the most popular trimming for up-to-date costumes.

The demand to Timorantly growing in popularity, especially the one of broad ribbon which must fit with uncompromising smoothness, and for this a featherbone foundation is absolutely essential—as essential in fact, as it is for stocks. Ribbon stocks, however, are giving place to the transparent collar of lace fagoting, etc., on sheer frocks, but ribbon girdles and sashes are of more importance than they have been in many years.

Long sash ends are particularly charming this season—these ends are often tied in original fashion, being knotted, not only at the waist line but once or twice below that.
