The New White Girl.
"I'm going away to-morrow. Won't you think of me sometimes while I'm gone?"
"Haven't you better ask papa if I may?"—Chicago American.

An Opinion.
Tourist—I'm afraid you're prejudiced against the oul and bears.
Farmer—Mebbe so, anyhow. I think there's more useful animals than they are.—N. Y. Times.

The Difference.
"I'm sorry we came to this place. It's hotter here than it is in the city."
"Yes; but the city is not so fashionable at this time of the year."—Chicago American.

That Wasn't.
He—I suppose he is a ruined man if she doesn't marry him.
She—No; she has no money. It will merely break his heart.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Wounded.
Johnny—Pa, how long is a sea serpent?
Pa—about the three summer months.—N. Y. Sun.
A man who has the secret affection of the people who work for him, and of his neighbors, earned it by kindness and because he had a heart.

It is not so much what a man says as how he says it that establishes the reputation of the ordinary humorist.

Prodigates are generally liberal, but very seldom just.

Helped Him Out.
"Your honor," said the prisoner at the bar, "I know the law. I am within my rights, sir, and I refuse to commit myself."
"Very well, sir," said the magistrate; "I'll save you the trouble. Thirty days."—Baltimore News.

All Mashed Up Again.
"It was very unfortunate, your running over that man," said the sympathetic gentleman to the troubled-looking chauffeur.
"Yes. I'd just had my auto freshly painted and enamelled."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Frank and Honest.
Butcher—What did you think of that steak I cut you yesterday?
Patron—To be perfectly frank with you, I thought it came off a South American cow that had been fattened on rubber trees.—N. Y. Times.

Jesting at Seaside.
Uppercut—I was sorry to hear that Skimmerchew has had the smallpox. Did it disfigure him much?
Atom—Disfigure him? No, it improved him. It changed his expression.—Chicago Tribune.

Doubtful Consultation.
"I'm afraid," said White Washington, "that I lack self-confidence."
"Cheer up," said Mrs. Cayenne. "Perhaps that fact indicates that you are a good judge of human nature."—Washington Star.

Their Confessions.
"I could never understand," remarked the cheerful idiot, "why bonillon cups should have two handles."
"If you had ever kept house," replied the philosopher, "you would. It takes twice as long for the domestic to break two off as it does one."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Those Girls Again.
May—He's awfully nervy. He tried his best to find out how old I am.
Fay—Yes, he admitted that to me.
May—And just for fun I told him I was 34. Did he tell you that?
Fay—No, but he did say you were the most truthful girl he had ever met.—Philadelphia Press.

Red Hair Counts.
Mrs. Crimmonbeak—it is said that red-haired people are less liable to become bald than those with hair of any other color.
Mr. Crimmonbeak—Of course; red-haired men have spirit, and they are not so ready to let their wives have their own way.—Venezuela Statesman.

It Stopped the Argument.
Williams—You must remember, my dear, that my note is better than yours.
His Dear Wife—Contentedly, when we come to consider that you married me and I married you.
And William said no more.—Columbian.

In Postscript.
Josh Medeiros—Wasn't the pay for the "Humber" awfully high?
Jake Whifflesworth—Thirty cents.
Josh Medeiros—Come off! I keep my way so in the long haul.
Jake Whifflesworth—Wiped, I paid 30 cents for eggs.—Columbian.

A Letter.
"So you don't believe in the mind cure?"
"No."
"Did you ever try it?"
"Well, I once tried to convince my wife that she didn't really want a new gown."—Chicago Post.

To Occasion for It.
Doubtless—What did Singleton say when you invited him to join our club?
Westerly—He said home was good enough for him as long as he remained a bachelor.—Chicago Daily News.

Like Any Other Boy.
"I, Tommy couldn't you have played in the middle back yard without getting yourself all covered with dirt?"
"Of course not, mamma. The car was there. How could I help getting into it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Human Nature.
Some people practice what they preach. But it's a long pipe down they preach to others by the yard and practice by the inch.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

IT'S UP TO HIM.

THE QUIET FARM LIFE.

There are but few Patrons, however of Manual, Amusing, or Useful of the Soil.

I would not try to make every boy a farmer, or every girl a farmer's wife, but it does seem to me that we should impress upon the children that, while the opportunities to make great fortunes will not often open to them on the farm, there are less failures among those engaged in our business than any other. When we read eulogies on the captains of industry, who have accumulated fortunes in mining, commerce and manufacturing, we do not hear of the poor, miserable privates who have fallen by the wayside, financial, moral and physical wrecks.

Do not teach the children that life's pathway is strewn with thorns and brambles in all directions. Too much preaching has already gone forth, and the masses are quaking, crushing, surging and jostling against each other, even to madness and destruction. Still, in all this wild rush, we occasionally see individuals who are quietly and gently, with a pleasant word and smile, making their way through the seething mass of humanity, almost without disturbing it, and reaching the desired goal. As sorrow and weeping may endure for the night, but by some in the morning, so will peace come with earnest, conscientious effort, accompanied with consideration for others.—Carrie L. Davier, before the New York State Grange.

OFFICIALLY INDORSED.

Ohio Republicans and Beer Sugar Industry Men Unanimous for Good Roads.

The progress that is being made by the good roads movement is indicated by the action of state legislatures and conventions in favor of road improvement. The action of the recent republican state convention in Ohio is unambiguously adopting a strong good roads plank indicates the force and popularity which this movement has acquired in the north. This is the first time such a stand has been taken by Ohio Republicans since the birth of the party.

Mr. Charles F. Saylor, special agent of the government for the investigation of the sugar industry, who has traveled through nearly all the northern and western states in the prosecution of his work, recently expressed the results of his observations as follows:

"Probably no other subject of interest to the rural population is receiving more attention throughout the nation than that of road improvement. One of the fundamental needs of society is a ready means of communication. The experiment stations of the country are now engaged in experimental work and actual demonstration with a view to stimulating the public mind and promoting the best and cheapest systems of good road building with local material. State legislatures are enacting better laws, and in some cases the principle of state aid has been adopted. The federal government has established an office of public road inquiries in the department of agriculture. Literature has been prepared and distributed for the education of the people on this subject.

"There is nothing that will work so effectively for good roads as publicity, the mother of invention. When a sugar factory is established farmers at once harvest the benefits of good roads. Advertisements, public meetings are held, and every public highway becomes the object of attention. It is found that the farmer requires at least four horses, and must deliver from two and a half to four tons of beets per load if he is to accomplish the best results in the saving of time and expense. Neighbors talk over road improvement and the idea becomes infectious. A public meeting is called, public roads are discussed, and an organization is effected which goes to work for the improvement of the roads. Among the interesting features of the work of promoting the progress of beet sugar industry, is attendance at these local meetings, at which roads and other subjects pertinent to the needs of these best-growing districts are considered. Permanent road building is one of the most important matters commonly discussed."

Reports from all sections indicate that the question of road improvement is one of the most popular subjects of discussion in farmers' meetings of all kinds, and state and national aid are being generally increased. The farmers are beginning to see that they have not received their share of attention from the national government, and demand substantial recognition in the way of federal aid and cooperation in the improvement of the rural highway.
