

THE DAIRY

CRUISING IN PERSIA.

Methods in the Shah's Realm Cling to Methods in Use Thousands of Years Ago.

A method so primitive that it is almost unknown elsewhere is still used by the Persian nomads in churning their butter.

ADVICE FOR THE COWS.

We Offer Green Food Produces as Much Milk as Greater Gain.

There is no better green food than apples for cows. Out of course, it won't do to let them have all they will eat at first.

TIMELY DAIRY NOTES.

The milk maker will get more milk and save the cow in better condition than the cow maker.

Newborn calves like the Jersey are usually a rough handling.

Experiments have been made in Germany showing that calves do better on soya than on milk and gained still more in weight.

A water supply in the cattle shed is a desirable improvement.

For good hay-making, it is important to cut the hay at the right time.

Philadelphia, which has the Liberty Bell and was the scene of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence at New York.

It is not surprising that New York ignored the Liberty Bell on its trip to Boston.

It is characteristic of New York to ignore everything beyond its own boundaries.

Five or six years ago I was working on one of the New York papers at the time of the restoration of Independence hall.

It occurred to me that a good story on the subject, illustrated with photographs, would make a timely feature.

I suggested it to the Sunday editor one day, but he was busy with other work and gave me scant attention.

I tried him two or three times later, but he was always preoccupied. Finally I caught him one day when he was at leisure.

What is this Independence hall you've been buzzing about? I sat down and explained to him, and actually it seemed as though the man had never known of the existence of such a building.

He was a typical New Yorker and had probably never been west of Newark in his life.

Oh, fudge! he said. I don't think that's of any interest to our readers. Now, here's a story about a prominent society woman who has six toes on each foot.

And she's going to submit to an operation to have the superfluous ones removed.

There's a story for you! Go out and see if you can get a photograph of her foot, and we'll make a double-page feature of it.

To cook is forbidden in some fashionable apartment-houses.

When the cook is forbidden in some fashionable apartment-houses, the occupant of one of them developed an after-dinner appetite for fried onions.

The people in the rooms overhead promptly demonstrated and had the feast suppressed.

Afterward, as the story goes, the heads of the two families became intimate, and the on-looker reproached the other man for being so particular.

Oh, wouldn't you find fault with you now? was the response.

My friend's onions don't smell so disagreeable as a stranger's. It was a careless utterance.

Your words may have betrayed the wisdom of the suggestion.

How the "strange miseries" of life would fall away and leave no intrusions if we would but cultivate the spirit of friendliness!

When Dr. J. S. Jerrold was told by his physician that he must die, he replied: "What and leave a family of helpless children? I won't die."

His resolution saved him over the crisis, and he lived many years longer.

The way to be well is to think health thoughts. Determine that you will have nothing to do with abnormalities of any kind.

Success. Resolve that you will keep yourself up to a high standard mentally, morally and physically.

And that you will always be ready to take hold of the duty which lies nearest with vigor and determination.

Some of the Philadelphians who accompanied the Liberty bell to Boston on Bunker Hill day have suggested that New England return the courtesy and send Plymouth rock to Philadelphia.

The rock is not so big that it could not be moved. The only objection to this is that it would establish a precedent that might bring confusion to the ancient landmarks.

Some one might want to send Bunker Hill on a tour of the country, and a big stock company might be formed to do it.

Valley Forge is a section of transport it to the St. Louis fair.

The London Times has a notice of an American book which contains the words "Two sopomores" which, with due apologies for our ignorance, we take to mean a kind of undergraduate at an American university.

There are three leading authorities from whom a comprehensive definition of the word "sopomore" may be had, namely, any sophomore, any freshman, and member of a college faculty.

CHIEF OF CONSPIRATORS.

Colonel Who Led the Serbian Assassins Was a Brother-in-Law of Queen Draga.

One of the most terrible features of the bloody drama played out in the royal palace of Belgrade, so recently, is that the chief of the band of assassins was a brother-in-law of the murdered queen.

This person is Col. Maschin, whose brother, an engineer, was the first husband of Queen Draga.

Col. Maschin seems to have quarreled with his sister-in-law long before her marriage with King Alexander. Previously to that event he had served with some distinction both in the Serbian army and the Serbian diplomatic service. He was for a time military attaché at Vienna, and afterward Serbian minister at Cettigne.

When his sister-in-law became queen he began to feel the effects of the quarrel with her, and was not an appointment and did little thereafter.

It is believed he even to have used his influence to influence his brother officer against the king and queen, and when the conspiracy against them was organized he was the chief mover.

His activity was not confined to organizing the plot. All accounts of the tragedy agree in stating that he actually led the band of assassins and urged to shoot and pierce the side and breast of the queen.

According to one account he is reported to have thrown of the dead bodies out of the windows of the palace of the ground that it was "business necessity." The manner is characteristic of the man.

Col. Maschin is now minister of public works in the Serbian cabinet, and has been advanced considerably in the military service, when all the royalties received pay for their "patriotism."
