Convention at McClure.

The Snyder County, Sunday School, K. L. C. E. and W. M. S. Union held its annual session at McClure, Pa., Oct. 7 and 8, 1903.

The President of the Union Hon. F. C. Bowersox presided ably during the entire session. In his address, setting forth the objects of the convention, and how to derive the greatest good, the president advanced the following excellent points. The purpose is to interchange ideas, gather thoughtful instruction, and be edited, and enlarge our social relations, form a more intimate acquaintanceship, and thus give mutual inspiration and incite earnestness.

The subject "With Christ in Samaria" was discussed by Rev. E. Crumbling. Christ was in Samaria, out of His way, to seek an opportunity to save souls. Likewise we should make sacrifices to help to accomplish this end.

The subject, "Preparation of the Teacher," was presented by Rev. A. D. Gramley. The teacher has a mission. He should prepare for it.

In the absence of Rev. N. J. Dabs, Rev. E. Crumbling opened the discussion of "The Devotional Life of the Leaguer". He presented it in these three divisions: What is it? How can it be maintained? Why maintained? It can only be maintained by prayer, reading the bible, and religious papers and books treating on the religious life.

Different members of the convention spoke on the subject of "The Benefit of the S. S. to the Scholar."

The subject, "A Model K. L. C. E. Prayer Service," was opened for discussion by Rev. J. Lawver.

1. A good Leader. 2. All the members present. 3. Pull together. 4. Have life.

The subject, "The Successful S. S. Superintendent" presented by Rev. J. Womeldorf.

Mrs. J. Womeldorf gave an excellent address on "The Missionary Enterprises in our Church". "Primary Work" was discussed by different members of the convention.

On Thursday evening a lecture was delivered on "The Pledge," by Rev. W. H. Fouke, editor of "K. L. C. E. Journal, and S. S. Literature," from Harrisburg. The lecture was deeply interesting, instructive, inspiring and convincing.

It awakened a deeper purpose in each bosom to be true to the pledge, and hold it more sacred.

The next session of the convention is to be held at Shrinor, Pa.

The union was reorganized as follows: President, F. C. Bowersox; V. P., Jacob Lawver; Secretary, A. S. Sechrist; Treasurer, W. H. Hartman; Superintendent of Home Department, Mrs. J. Womeldorf.

Committee on resolutions offered its report.

The convention proved an interesting and successful one.

Tom Harter in Snyder County.

In last week's Bellefonte "Gazette," T. H. Harter, formerly Editor of the Post wrote of what he says he saw and heard in Snyder county. His letter is as follows:

Berks county has had its reputation as a Democratic stronghold from time immemorial. Snyder county may be classed as irrevocably and irredeemably Republican. Penns and Brush Valleys, this county, are the Democratic strongholds, because they are inhabited mostly by Pennsylvania Germans who seldom change their political faith. This in all probability accounts for the regular and overwhelming Republican majority in Snyder county. Both districts are "set" in their faith, and their customs are as unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Years ago Snyder county had its leaders—the one was Jere Crouse, who served as prothonotary for seven successive terms or twenty-one years. The other leader was Daniel Bolender, now deceased, who was elected five times to the office of sheriff. As these two leaders belonged to the same party—Republican—and always had a safe majority behind them, many were the acrimonious campaigns through which they passed to retain the leadership. Both were skilled politicians, liberal, open hearted, ready to forgive their enemies and marshal them to their individual support at the next campaign; for as soon as one campaign was over they turned over a new leaf in the political ledger and began to pave the way for the next contest two or three years hence, when they would again come up for office. Crouse was the accepted Cameron and Quay leader and so potent was his influence with the people that many looked to him for all changes in the government which they considered necessary. Upon one occasion one of his constituents warned him that if he did not effect a reduction of the tariff on sugar he would be defeated in the next campaign. Luckily the price of the commodity came down and Jere was given the credit for it and was triumphantly elected for his effective work in lessening the expense of canning fruit. To-day the county has many leaders, and it is declared that though the campaign practically ended by securing the Republican nomination, the expense of obtaining it does not justify the attempt; for like in Centre county, they have their Esnos who would sell to a fair-weather friend for a mess of porridge, forget principle and vote for the man with the long purse or the well-filled demijohn. So much for Snyder county politics which like our own county badly need the application of banner-ry and a scrubbing-brush.

The citizenship of the county is principally composed of that sturdy class of people known as Pennsylvania Dutch—the best people on God's green earth. Slow but sure—they never travel on the cow-catcher nor on the rear platform, but when the train rolls into the depot they are all there with both feet. Commercially they are well-to-do—though they may not look it; which recalls an incident of our own experience. A man appeared on the diamond at Middleburg some years ago during court week (which is the quarter-annual occasion for the gathering of the clans) and offered harness at public sale. Not receiving any bids at his first offering, he became very much discouraged, declaring that these people had no money and that he was going home; whereupon some friend informed him that they had more money than he ever saw, and that if he would once get them started he would soon sell all he had. He concluded to stay until the next day, when bidding began and he sold three dozen sets in less than two hours. The astonishing feature of the whole affair was that only two of the purchasers accepted the liberal time payment which was offered—the rest all paying cash for their purchases.

The town of Middleburg, the county seat, is becoming quite a beautiful little town. Notwithstanding the combined population of Franklin and Middleburg of about 800, it has one rattling fine bank and another one started for which the building is in course of erection. It has good buildings and good substantial people, but they are too slow else they would have committed the unpardonable blunder of allowing an outside corporation to bring water-works into the town from a fine mountain stream less than two miles away which affords a gravity pressure of 90 pounds and will net the company from 25 to 50 per cent. on the money invested.

Among its men who gained a place in history are Governor Snyder, after whom the county was named, whose remains lie buried at Selinsgrove, and another was Honorable Ner Middle-warth, long since dead, a member of Congress and a man of notable character. He was a typical Pennsylvania Dutchman, and possessed not only a strong intellect, indomitable energy and great political acumen, but enjoyed an abundance of the dry humor and natural wit for which that race is noted. This strikingly manifested itself during his term in Congress when one of his colleagues delivered himself an address which was so embellished with Latin and Greek quotations that it disgusted the old veteran, and at its conclusion he jumped to his feet and began a harangue in Pennsylvania Dutch which so astonished the speaker that he called upon him for an explanation of his outlandish utterances, declaring that he was out of order. Mr. Middle-warth blandly explained his action by stating that the language addressed to the last speaker was good, old Pennsylvania Dutch, and that he meant by it to convince the House that the last speaker was not the only man in that body who could handle two languages. This performance, with his already recognized ability, attracted attention to him and a short time later, at a banquet, he was requested to carve the turkey in Pennsylvania Dutch style. Mr. Middle-warth promptly accepted the challenge, and placing the bird in front of him he sliced off a "drumstick" and "second joint" which he delivered on his own plate, and then, setting the turkey back in the middle of the table, remarked: "Now, gentlemen; help yourselves. That is Pennsylvania Dutch style!"

Our visit last week was principally confined to McKees Falls, where we went for the purpose of catching fish, but to our surprise found that the bass for which the State has stopped almost all kinds of fishing and spent thousands of dollars in legislation for their preservation, had mysteriously disappeared, and we didn't get a bite. Some claim that the pollution of the waters of the Susquehanna has caused their destruction, while others attribute their absence to the coal washed into the stream from the anthracite mines on the West Branch, which practically covers its bottom and fills the crevices under the rocks where the fish were wont to make their habitation. It were well, therefore, for our law makers to pay some attention to the preservation of the natural conditions of the stream and not so much to the poor fellows who apply heretofore considered legitimate methods to capture a mess of fish.

Notwithstanding our failure to capture fish our stay at McKees Falls was a delightful experience, for we were under the careful protection of "Jumbo" Kerstetter, the proprietor of the hotel, whose house is situated on one of the most picturesque spots along the entire stretch of the Susquehanna, and the mention of whose name brings back pleasant memories of chicken and waffles and everything else to tempt the epicure. His table is a realization of the hunter's dream whose provisions are exhausted and he goes hungry to sleep. As high as fifty guests at one time flock to his house to eat and sleep and listen to the rush of the mighty Susquehanna as it tumbles over the falls.

There is, moreover, no place in the State that affords equal opportunity to study human nature. Here it is found in its primitive state. A few incidents will suffice:

Some time ago a native of that locality, while on his way to the Falls, was overtaken by a minister who invited him to ride along. The conversation drifted along pleasantly for a time, until the minister asked the boy if he could tell him the way to Meiserville. "You chust go down dis here bush till you come to an apple tree field and then turn right," was the reply.

The minister amused by this young man's picturesque English, asked him what he did for a living, to which he replied that he was a day laborer. This familiarity emboldened the young man to ask the man of the cloth (whom he had not recognized as a minister) what he did for a living, to which he replied: "I show people the road to Heaven." This was too much for the native, and he burst forth in Dutch: "Dunner wedder! Doh room cooma da leit der wake nuch em himmel from 25 to 50 per cent. on the money invested.

Thunderation? To come around here to show people the road to Heaven and don't know where Meiserville is! Asking one of the men who extends expectorate into the same old spittoon which stands on a newspaper in the centre of the hotel lobby, whether the mail, which is carried by stage to Middleburg ever missed connections, he replied: "Yes, in de winter wende snow is deep wogot'em studder ind as we got 'em."

This is the blue's English into knots is equal to the excitement one body paid another who was in the habit of being tardy at these gatherings, when she said:

"Well, well! You're early of late. You used to be behind before. I'm glad to see you're first at last."

So here is part of what you see and hear in Snyder county. If you have never been there, go now; and after you have been there once you will be sure to go again."

Tom evidently overlooked the fact that almost a century ago, Rev. Henry Fries, a preacher of Centre county in delivering his farewell sermon said: "Gelt zwinked de welt und dunhite Brush Valley."
