DOWIE SPEAKS OF LIFE SECRET

Says He is Not the Son of John Murray Dowie, of Iowa.

New York, Oct. 27.—In a broken voice, with tears streaming down his face, John Alexander Dowie stood on the platform in Madison Square Garden before an audience of 10,000 persons and announced that in truth he was not the son of John Murray Dowie, of Essex, Ia., from whom he takes his patronymic.

He declared he had made his mother believe her marriage to Dowie's father was shameful, and the army officer having been taken away by his relatives, his mother, in the first flush of her shame, had sought to give her son a name by marrying John Murray Dowie.

The revelation was made at the end of an hour's tirade against the press of this city, its treatment of his work and himself being styled a "conspiracy of falsehood," the reporters denounced as "yellow dogs, poisonous reptiles, who have wrecked thousands of lives and broken thousands of hearts."

He led up to the publication of extracts from letters passing between himself and John Murray Dowie, indicating Dowie's renunciation of the latter as a parent, and which were responsible for the general overseer's partial exposition of the great secret of his life.

Shouting at one moment in a fit of violent rage at the newspapers, Mr. Dowie would the next moment speak in the most gentle voice of his mother and wife.

Dowie announced that just one year ago he had addressed a meeting in Chicago, at which he had told of an attempt to blackmail him by a man writing from Boston, who claimed to have certain letters which had passed between himself and John Murray Dowie.

"That man wrote me," said Mr. Dowie, "that the letters if published would ruin me, and in the anxiety of my heart said that for $25,000 he would turn them over to me as well as to a Chicago newspaper."

Mr. Dowie was becoming greatly excited and tramped the platform with nervous steps, his frame quivering with the intensity of his emotion.

"The best proof that John Murray Dowie was not my father," he shouted, "is that he has given up my letters to him, rebuking him for the most terrible crime a man could ever commit, in my judgment. Were it all against myself, I would not care, but there is one, the dearest, sweetest, purest woman that ever was, who is now 19 years, thank God, in Heaven—my mother."

"I denounce the publication of those letters because they are false in many parts, large extracts being omitted, thereby distorting the meaning of the text."

"I want to say that I never wanted this story to come out, but it is known that I am not the son of the miserable scoundrel, who, in order to strike at me, sold the letters in which I reproached him to the vile press of New York."

Dowie burst into invective of the bitterest type against the press for publishing the letters. He said he had a man seized by the editor of the New York Daily News, and then, as if upon the expiration of his trade, 1:58 1/2 was called out.

At the close of the address Dowie pronounced his benediction: "God bless the man who wrote the papers in which I have been mentioned, and may I never see him again."
