REST FOR THE WEARY

Rev. Dr. Talmage Shows How to Lighten Life's Burdens.

different canvas from that which he first saw. His cheek flushed; his eye grew bright; he looked at that picture from one side of the room and then from the other. At last, after many minutes of glorious soul thought, he cried out in rapture: "Beautiful! Beautiful! Is it not beautiful?" When young men and young women first open the Bible the gospel promises in reference to sorrows and heavy burdens do not appeal very strongly to them. Their horizons are always rainbowed. Their hillsides are always hanging gardens and terraced vineyards. Their bodies always seem to have the warm, rich blood of perpetual youth coursing through their veins. A physician's prescription is not sought after by the well nor an oculist by those having good eyes. But when, like that young man who studied in the art schools of Europe, after we have been compelled to take a long course in the "school of adversity" and then postgraduate course after postgraduate course, oh then how different God's sweet promises appear to us!

Today I would talk to those who have floundered knee deep and chin deep in the quicksands of trouble. I would try to interpret for you what the gospel rest of my text means. I would interpret it not only for those who have found this rest, but also for those who may be persuaded to seek it as a God given blessing at the foot of the cross. What is your burden, my brother? Perhaps it is some sorrow common to the whole human race. It is very heavy and no lighter from the fact that others are bearing the same load. Perhaps it is some trouble peculiar to yourself that you cannot bear to describe even to a friend. "Every heart knoweth its own bitterness;" but, whatever it may be, the invitation Christ gives is for you.

If a man gets $50 or $100 ahead in the bank then comes some dangerous sickness in the family. His daughter is threatened with blindness, and she has to go to the best oculist and have the most expensive glasses, or his wife breaks down, and she must go off for rest, and extra servants are hired, and the whole sum of money is soon swept away. The financial burden is the heavy one to bear. Most of us are ready to grant that. That burden, too, Christ will bear if you commit it to his hands. Your anxiety, your distress, your foreboding, he will relieve, and he will give you rest. "Now," says one one, "the preacher is talking simple nonsense! If I do not get out and hustle and work and worry and get the money to feed and clothe and educate my children God will never do it for me. I do not believe in expecting that God will relieve me of my financial distress any more than I would expect the water to boil in the kettle if I did not have a fire in the stove or my cupboard be full of food unless I could order it at the grocer's or the butcher's. When you begin to talk about God carrying the burden of financial distress then you are simply talking about something you know nothing about." "No, my brother, you are wrong. The mightiest men of God have always rolled at Christ's feet the burden of financial distress, and God has never failed them. By that I do not mean these men have been lazy or indolent. But I do mean that while they were physically and mentally doing their level best to earn the necessary amount for their livelihood they were at the same time placing their financial obligations before Christ and asking him to furnish in his own way the necessary means. Study the life of Moody. Who furnished him the money with which to carry on his great work? God; emphatically God. When Mr. Moody received his invitation to go and hold evangelistic services in England and Scotland he practically did not have a cent. He accepted the invitation. He engaged passage upon a transatlantic steamer. The time grew nearer and nearer for him to sail. Some one asked him where he was going to get the money with which to sail. "I do not know," he answered, "but God will send it in time. I am going upon his mission." About two or three days before he was to sail a gentleman walked into his office and said: "Mr. Moody, I hear you are going to Europe. I thought you might want a little money. Here is $500, if you will take it." "Thank you," answered Moody. He took it. He took not as from man, but from God. That $500 paid Mr. Moody's passage over to England, so that he could preach Jesus Christ in the home of Robert McChesney and John Robertson and Rowland Hill.

And, my dear Christian friends, this plea to roll the financial distress of your life upon Christ brings up a very pertinent lesson which ought to be practiced by our churches. Do you know why the average Christian church is having such hard work to get along financially? At the end of the year a few rich men have to put their hands in their pockets and make up the heavy deficit. It is because these churches in looking after the temporal life of their members instead of the spiritual are not doing their duty. The best way to get a full church treasury is not, as some people suppose, to have a bazaar, or an oyster supper, or an evening's entertainment of Mrs. Jarley's waxworks, or a concert. The true way to get a full church treasury is to have a full prayer meeting. If the rich men of a church, the leading men officially, would set the right example to the average church members and come to the weekday meetings and take a Sunday school class and practice prayer in public as well as in private, then there would be no difficulty in meeting the financial obligations of the boards of trustees. If we, the members of a church, honestly and faithfully do the work of our church in a spiritual way God will see to it that we shall be able to easily carry its financial burdens in a temporal way. The Heavenly Father offers rest also in reference to the salvation of our children and loved ones. Nearly every healthy normal man has two ambitions. The one is to live long. If I had my own way and could still live in health and strength and live amid the surroundings I am having today as far as I can make out I would like to live on earth at least 1,875 years. When I think of all the glorious opportunities of working on earth for my Lord and Master I would not voluntarily change places with the brightest robed denizen of all the redeemed immortals in heaven. I feel a great deal in reference to my earthly work as did the elder of a Presbyterian church. When he was very sick some one came to him and said, "My brother, how happy you ought to be that you may soon associate with the angels." "Yes," answered the sick man, "that may all be true, but as far as I can make out I would on earth for a little while at least rather associate with one woman of flesh and blood, called my wife, whom I know and love, than with any twenty angels with whom at the present time I am unacquainted." The second ambition which nearly every healthy, normal man has is not only to live long in an earthly sense, but some day to own a large home, in which he can gather all his children and grandchildren and friends and loved ones about him. And if a man longs to have an earthly home, where he can collect his loved ones, how much more must the Christian long that in his heavenly home he may be able to collect all his dear ones, his children and brothers and sisters and parents and friends—those who are bound to him by ties of love as well as of blood. There is not a true Christian man or woman who has not felt at heart the heavy burden of an unweaned child of relative or friend. Ah, that is a heavy burden to bear! If I would throw this meeting open to ask for requests for prayers from all over this house people would rise and say: "Pray for my husband," "Pray for my child," "Pray for my brother," "Pray for my roommate," "Pray for my sister." But, friend, why do you ask this pulp to pray for your loved one? Why do you not bring that burden, that heavy burden of the salvation of your child or husband, to Christ? Does not Jesus want you to do this today? If Christ will carry the heavy burden of financial distress surely he will bear the heavier burden of the salvation of your children. Some years ago a noted evangelist was holding a series of meetings in the church of which I was then pastor. Among the thrilling incidents which he told was one that appeared to me at that time very far-fetched. I said it could not be so. He described how a mother had a wayward boy who had run away to sea and was at that time in an Asiatic port. This mother carefully studied the Bible and came to the conclusion that she had a right to ask for the salvation of her boy and that she would then and there throw the burden of his salvation upon Christ. She went to her room, after giving word that under no condition was she to be interrupted. Then she opened the Bible, laid it upon a chair and knelt down. Then she began to pray for the salvation of that boy. She said: "O God, Jesus has said that if I ask anything in his name thou wilt grant my request. I am going to stay here pleading upon my knees for the salvation of my child until thou hast given to me the sweet consciousness that he is saved." She stayed there from 6 until 7, 7 until 8, 9 until 10, 10 until 11, until 5 o'clock in the morning that woman stayed. Then she arose from her knees and said, "My Heavenly Father, thou hast answered my prayer." "At that very time," said the evangelist, "the boy in the foreign port was convicted of sin and sent a letter home to his mother that he had given his heart to Christ." But as I afterward began to ponder over the story, in the light of the Scriptures and of personal history, I came to the conclusion that that story was true or at least the gospel promise could be true. We have a right to ask for the salvation of our loved ones. And if we ask and plead faithfully and truly God will answer our prayers. Oh, that we might, one and all, here and now, enter into a holy conspiracy of prayer for the salvation of our loved ones! This was the way a great revival wave was started in one of my old churches. It was by Christian people, members of that church, getting together week after week and praying for distinct individuals. It was in this way that my grandmother and grandfather were converted. Some of you may have heard the wonderful story written by the pen or spoken by the lips of my father. It was by a company of earnest and tearful mothers gathering together at a certain time of the day in the barns to pray for the salvation of their children until scores and hundreds stood up in the little village church of Somerville to confess Christ, and the whole region was moved by the power of the Holy Ghost. It is by a conspiracy of prayer that a revival can always be started and our loved ones swept into the kingdom by a tidal wave of mercy. The great trouble with the Christian church as a whole and with Christians as individuals is that we have broken away from the old anchorage of gospel truth. We have lost faith in God that he is able to do all things; we have lost faith in prayer; we have lost faith in the power of the Holy Ghost. And the great mission of the Christian pulpit today is to revive in the pew the old gospel seeds of faith and hope. When Wilton Merle Smith was called to the Central Presbyterian church of New York city he said to the committee which waited on him: "You do not want me as your pastor. I am not an intellectual teacher; I am only a simple gospel preacher." "Ah," answered the men, "that is the reason we want you. The people are hungering and thirsting after the simple gospel truths." And it is because the simple, salient gospel beliefs are so much needed today that I am preaching this sermon upon faith and the belief that Christ can save our loved ones if we only pray. Thus, my dear friends, tired and heavy hearted, tramping along the highway of life, I want to lift the heavy burdens off your hearts. It is these burdens that are crushing you, not the journey. Many of the older men have read an essay which was famous many years ago. It was written by the "Country Parson" and called "Concerning People Who Carry Weights in Life." The author went on to show that it was the extra weights some had to carry that made them lose the race of life. And it is these extra burdens which we can cast at the foot of the cross that make us labor and heavy laden. Will you not accept the invitation of my text? Will you not live in the faith of that blessed promise and die in the hope, as did the beautiful Princess Elizabeth, the daughter of Charles I. of England? Upon her marble monument in Newport church, erected by Queen Victoria, is recorded the fact that she was one morning found dead, with her head pillowed upon the open Bible and her finger pointing to the simple words, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Today I urge upon you this wide invitation, with its glorious promise. Christ bids you come with all your burdens and trials, and he will bear them for you. He offers you rest in this life, rest in death and eternal rest beyond the grave. Come unto him all ye who labor and are heavy laden, and he will give you rest.
