

LOCALS.

Ladies, if you want new goods, good goods, and cheap goods, go to Well's, one door below Wall's hotel.

Hard to Beat.—Our friend, John G. Davis, Esq., of Meshoppen, sent us a potato last week, which weighed three pounds and nine ounces. We have some farmers in this region, who raise the tubers by the thousands of bushels; but of the boat loads which are shipped from this place, yearly, we have not seen one, that approached this one for size. They are all "small potatoes" compared to this. Send on your big potatoes.

A Heavy Draft.—Hon. Peter Ent, of Light Street, suffers severely by the operation of the Militia Draft. Two of his sons, Capt. W. H. Ent, and Lieut. U. H. Ent, have both been in the war now over a year—and nobler officers or braver soldiers are not in the ranks—and now, his other two sons, O. P. Ent, and Robert Ent, have been Drafted with Daniel, Mr. Ent's youngest brother. This is drawing heavily upon one patriotic family, indeed.—Columbia Democrat.

Wanted.—At this office on subscription—Forty bushels of ears of corn, Forty bushels of Buckwheat, Forty bushels of Oats, Forty bushels of Wheat, Forty bushels of Rye, Forty bushels of good, unbruised winter apples, Forty bushels of good potatoes, Forty pounds of holly, Forty gallons of sweet cider, Forty pounds of pork, Forty pounds of beef, Forty out of Hay, Forty bundles of good cornstalks, Forty pounds of dried apples, Forty pounds of white beans, and Forty dollars in money, skin-plasters, postage stamps, Lincoln cent, or anything authorized or allowed to pass, current as a circulating medium in these times of "great financial prosperity."

Died.

MOORE—At Georgetown Hospital, Oct. 14th, 1862, of Typhoid Fever, Thomas S. Moore, of Tunkhannock Township, Wyoming County, Pa. "One who in life, where'er he mov'd, Drove after him the hearts of many; Yet now, as though he ne'er were loved, Dies here, unseen, unwept by any!" Sad things are the south winds telling, Low sobbing along the leas; October's gay charms dispelling, Bearing blight to flower and tree. They sigh for site of high bearing, Noble brow, and eye of light; His Country's call nobly heeding, He hastened to aid the right. The tearful farewell had been spoken, He had turned from his parents' heart; While his sisters with anguish heart-broken, Beheld their loved brother depart. But now he at last lay dying, Not of wounds from the field of strife; A wasting disease seemed dying, The fast ebbing fountain of life. Beside him with magical finger, Stood fancy with memory's book; And o'er each fair page bade him linger, And on its fond imagery look. He saw there his home by the mountain, Beside it the fountain that burst; And he thought how its fresh flowing water, Would now quench his deep-fever thirst. There too, was a couch with cool pillow, For his tired limbs to press, 'twould be joy; The fetter who oft sends to heaven, A prayer for the wandering boy. Yet lingered not long the fair picture, For calmly he yielded his dying; And when the lone watcher bent o'er him, He smiled in the slumber of death. God help the home-hearts in their anguish, To bear up 'neath tidings so dread, That have burst like a thunder-bolt on them, The absent,—the dying,—the dead! Oh! there is a sorrow that searthen, These feeble expressions of tears; That marketh time's cordial and turneth, Undimmed from the shadow of years. Fall many a heart will be shaded, With the mantle of grief for a day; But there are hearts in which arrows, Of grief, like a canker shall prey. Hearts in long after years beating, As to-night they are throbbing with pain; And in dreams hear the footsteps so welcome; That will never be coming again. M. PATRICK.
