WEATHER HINTS FOR FARMERS.

The following are extracts from Admiral Fitzroy's "Manual of Practical Meteorology." They were intended for the climate of England, but are also of interest here, as telling the signs of the weather.

Weather clear or cloudy, a rosy sky at sunset presages fine weather; a sickly-looking greenish hue, wind and rain; a dark (or Indian) red, rain; a red sky in the morning, bad weather or much wind (perhaps rain); a gray sky in the morning, fine weather; a high down, wind; a low down, fair weather.

Soft-looking or delicate clouds foretell fine weather, with moderate or light breezes; hard-edged silky-looking clouds, wind. A dark greenish blue sky is windy, but a bright blue sky indicates fine weather. Small ink-looking clouds foretell rain; light seed clouds driving across heavy masses show wind and rain; but if alone, may indicate wind only.

High upper clouds crossing the sun, moon, or stars, in a direction different from that of the lower clouds, or the wind then felt below, foretell a change of wind toward their direction.

After a fine clear weather, the first signs in the sky, of a coming change are usually light streaks curls, wisps, or mottled patches of white distinct vapors, which increase, and are followed by a murky cloud that grows into cloudiness. This appearance, more or less oily or watery, as wind or rain will prevail, is an infallible sign.

Usually, the higher and more distant such clouds seem to be, the more gradual, but general, the coming change of weather will prove.

Light, delicate, quiet tints or colors, with soft undefined forms of clouds, indicate and accompany fine weather; but usually gaily hues, with hard, definitely-outlined clouds, foretell rain and probably strong wind.

Misty clouds forming, or hanging on heights, show wind and rain coming if they remain, increase, or descend. It they rise or disperse the weather will improve or become fine.

When sea-birds fly out early, moderate wind and fair weather may be expected. When they hang about the land, or over it, sometimes flying inland, expect a strong wind with stormy weather. As many creatures besides birds are affected by the approach of rain or wind, such indications should not be slighted by an observer who wishes to forecast weather, or compare its variations.

There are other signs of a coming change in the weather known less generally than may be desirable, and therefore worth notice; such as, when birds of long flight—rooks, swallows, or others—hang about home, and fly up and down or low, rain or wind may be expected. Also when animals seek sheltered places, instead of spreading over their usual ranges—when pigeons do not ascend readily (or straightly upwards during calm)—an unfavorable change is probable.

Dew is an indication of fine weather, so is fog—Neither of these two formations occur under an overcast sky or when there is much wind. One sees fog occasionally rolling away, as it were, by wind, but seldom or never formed while it is blowing.

Remarkable clearness of atmosphere near the horizon—distant objects, such as hills unusually visible or raised by refraction—and what is called a good "hearing day"—may be mentioned among signs of wet, if not wind, to be expected.

More than usual twinkling of the stars, indistinct or apparent multiplications of the moon's horns, haloes, "wind dogs," and the rainbow, are more or less significant or increasing wind, if not approaching rain, with or without wind.

GRIND THE TOOLS.

Keep the tools sharp or they will not cut. A dull tool wastes time, and he who permits it to work when in that condition, is a dull fellow. The best turners are those who have sharpest tools; the most successful surgeons use the keenest knives, and the most enterprising and energetic men in civil life are those whose wits have been early ground sharp, and whose perceptive faculties have been whetted by sore experience in early life. A dull tool is a useless implement, and a thick-headed, unobservant person is the only one who should be found wielding it. The old-age heather leaves no separate, but breaks and works off by attrition particles of the substance on which it operates. Grind up the tools, and sharpen the wit as well; if one is keen, the other will in all probability be in a similar state from the force of sympathy alone. A boy with a dull pocket-knife is one who swings on the gate and who dodges his duty; he is one who in after life will be a dunce and a chamber of the ground; he will add nothing to the world of science, neither will he take from it; his existence is merely animal, his thoughts and ideas, if he has any, wholly conventional. His comrade, with a keen blade, makes models of machinery, or steamer, and in these he becomes a George Steers, or so develops his mother wit as to be a decided acquisition to the community. Let us have all the tools in good condition, sharp, trenchant, and always ready for service; then, and then only will the result produced be equal to the time and labor expended.

VALUE OF OLD SHERRY WINE.

In an article on wine, the California Wine and Wood Grocer says:

"In no other part of Spain is there made any white wine at all comparable in flavor with that made within a small distance around Yerez de la Frontera; respecting which it may be further stated that no other wine improves by age in an equal degree; respecting which it may be further stated that no other wine improves by age in an equal degree; so well established is this fact among the great wine exporters of St. Marys and San Lucear, that scarcely any price would induce them to sell their Madras Botas (wicker butts) that have arrived at more than thirty years of age, and some affirm that they have some as old as sixty years certain—and probably containing some wine double that age, having been filled up from quintage; as an estimated value, such Madras Botas have had a price set on them equal to $5,000 per butt of 130 gallons, or about seventy-five cents per wine glassful; we once had an opportunity of tasting some, a quarter-butt of which was invoiced at $1,000, and cost the owner, when bottled, about thirty-five cents per glass."

BUILDERS.—The fierce winds of this month will be sure to find every loose piece of siding. See that the animals do not suffer from a cold draft, which the driving of a few nails will stop. Have a contrivance for fastening barn doors open, as well as shut. We have known a barn-door swinging in the wind to inflict serious injury. Look out for loose blinds and shutters; they soon bang themselves in pieces. Paining may be done, though a driving rain is injurious to a coat of paint if it comes upon it before it is dry. If not done early, the botum will injure the permanency of the paint. As a rule, Autumn is preferable to late spring painting.

TOMATO VINEGAR.—Take ripe tomatoes, and after washing them put them in a conical sieve, (a colander will answer just as well,) break them to pieces with the hand and rub out the juice. Put this in a large jar, or some other vessel, and in about 24 hours, or if the weather is hot, perhaps less, the pulp of the tomato will rise to the top as the juice rises on small beer. Skin this off, and then put the juice in your vinegar keg or barrel, and put it in a warm place, and if you do not have the best of vinegar, it will make your fault.

Wise and Otherwise.

COULDN'T SPELL IT.

A Yankee, from the Green Mountains, visited the city of London. While passing through one of the thoroughfares, his attention was arrested by some specimens of writing paper, exposed for sale at a shop window. Seeing the proprietor of the establishment standing at the door, the Yankee civilly inquired of him what he did with "them nice bits of paper?"

"We keep them to tie up gape seed in," said the cookney, snappishly.

"O, yo da—du ye?" said Johnathan. Passing down the street a few steps, our indignant Yankee saw another merchant.

"I say, mister, can you tell me what that feller does for a livin' what keeps them ere nice bits of paper at the window?"

"Yes sir; he is a small dealer in paper, and a sort of a scribe. He writes letters for persons."

"I reckon he is a very small dealer and that he is, a pharisee as well as a scribe. Do you think he will write a letter for me if I pay him for it?"

"Certainly he will."

The Yankee thrust his hands into his pockets almost up to his elbows, and walked back.

"I say, mister, they say as how you sell paper and write letters for folks what can't write. What will you do to write a letter to my sister Sally?"

"I shall charge you five shillings."

"Will ye write just what I tell ye, and spell the words right as we do in Vermont?"

"To be sure I will."

"Well, I guess you may write to Sally."

The Londoner procured pen, ink and paper, and the Yankee commenced dictating after the following style:

"Dear Sister Sally,

"Rived in London last week"

"Hev ye got that down?"

"Ye—go on."

"Thought I'd go into the country and take a ride."

"Wal, the old mare balked."

"She wouldn't go, so I lickered her."

"Well, go on."

"Lickered her—licked her—licked her—"

"Well, go on."

"Lickered her—licked her—licked her—"

"What is the use of saying it so many times?"

"None of yer business. I pay you five shillings—"

Lickered her—licked her—licked her—"

"This page is full of lickered her."

"Turn over then; "licked her—licked her—licked her—"

"What is the use of saying it so many times?"

"None of yer business. I pay you five shillings—"

Lickered her—licked her—licked her—"

"You are not intending to say that as many times as you said lickered her?"

"None of yer business. I pay you; kickered her—licked her—licked her—"

"She wouldn't go then, so I sharpened the end of the whip handle, and I pricked her—pricked her—pricked her—"

"I cannot see any sense in all this."

"Never mind, I pay you; liker other—licked her—pricked her—licked her—pricked her—"

"Lickered her—pricked her—licked her—"

"She wouldn't go then, so I got out and I"—(here the Yankee made a chirping noise with his tongue and lips which had no relation to orthography.)

"I cannot spell that."

"O, ye can't spell that, ha? Wal, ye needn't write any more for me."

"No more said the Yankee."

"Not a word to close with?"

"Nary a word."

"You will pay me for what I have written?"

"Not a red. You didn't write down all I told you to."

"Well sir, what am I to do with all this paper I have spoiled?"

"Keep it to tie up gape seed in."

"SET HIM AGAIN."

A very worthy fisherman, by the name of Grizzle, was drowned some time since and all search for his body proved unavailing. After it had been in the water some months, however, it was discovered floating on the surface, and taken to the shore; whereupon Mr. Smith was dispatched to convey the intelligence to the much afflicted widow.

"Well, Mrs. Grizzle, we have found Mr. Grizzle's body."

"You don't say so?"

"Yes, we have; the jury has got on it, and found it full of eels."

"You don't say Mr. Grizzle's body is full of eels?"

"Yes, it is; and we went to know what you will have done with it?"

"How many eels do you think there is in him?"

"Well, about a bushel."

"Well then, I think you had better send the eels up to the house and set him again?"

EXTRAORDINARY CAUTION.—There is a railroad out West which is bound to be on the safe side. It is a double track, and as the train once run off the track, got another train approaching on the opposite track, an order was issued, which insured safety as long as it was strictly enforced:

"Hereafter, when trains moving in opposite directions are approaching each other, on separate tracks, conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the meeting, and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other."

A young lady of eighteen was engaged to be married to a gentleman of thirty-six. Her mother having noticed her low spirits for some time, inquired the reason. "Oh dear mamma," replied she, pettishly, "I was thinking about my husband being twice my age."

"That's very true, but he is only thirty-six."

"He is only thirty-six now, but when I am sixty—"

"Oh dear! why, then he'll be a hundred and twenty!"

"Going, going, going," cried out an auctioneer.

"Where are you going?" asked a passerby.

"Well," replied the knight of the hammer, "I'm going up to the Zoological Gardens, to tell the managers that one of their balloons is loose."

LEAP YEAR INCIDENTS.—At a public "Tea Party" recently held in one of our country towns, where sentiment was in order, a timid bachelor was bold enough to remind the ladies that leap year was upon them, offering the following:—

Three long dreary years I have waited for this, Now if you'll pop the question, I'll surely say yes

To which the lady promptly responded as follows—

The man without courage to do his own wooing, May do his own washing and baking and sewing

A western paper announced the illness of the editor, piously adding:—"All good ayng subscribers are requested to mention him in their prayers. The others need not, as the prayers of the wicked avail nothing," according to good authority."

It is better to be laughed at for not being married, than to be unable to laugh because you are

It can fell, hem, bound, gather, tuck, quilt, and has capacity for a great variety of ornamental work. This is not the only Machine that can hem, fell, bind, and so forth, but it will do so better than any other Machine. The Letter 'A' Family Sewing Machine has had in a great variety of cabinet cases. The Folding Case, which is now becoming so popular, is as its name implies, one that can be folded into a box or case which, when opened, makes a beautiful, substantial, and spacious stand for the work to rest upon. The cases are of every imaginable design—the wood, from the nut, for, or a delicately finished ash can make them.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with all twist, thread, needles, oil, etc., of the very best quality.
