CULTIVATION OF BEANS.

have caused beans to bear so high a price great number of varieties, but the white but would'nt be kissed. sorts only are raised for use in the dry state, though some colored ones are much richer. bearing. The Marrow, called also White Marrowfat, is a favorite sort, and by many flected. preferred to any other for cooking. The Pea Bean, also known as the army or ship bean, is quite small and rounded, and is the kind more largely cultivated. The soil should be warm and light, and not too highly manuranswer. The planting is best done as soon as danger from is over, but if put in any time before the last week in June, they are arm, "I'll cut it at home." pretty sure to make a crop. They should be planted in rows about 11 feet apart, or sufficiently wide to allow of working with the cultivator. They may be planted with bean drills which do the work expeditiously, some of which drop the seed in a continuous line, and others are so contrived as to plant in hills. From a bushel to six pecks are for an acre. Though the planting is generally left until the press of spring work is over, it is advisable to get them in as early as possithe way of early frosts, and to have the land going to be a boy or girl." clear for fall crops. Do not let the weeds get the start, but hoe as soon as they make their appearance. Ground that has been cultivated with beans is in excellent condition for wheat .- Agriculturist.

MEADOW HAY.

The value of most meadow grasses for feeding purposes is far greater than is generally supposed. The principal reason why they have not been more highly appreciated is, perhaps, the very improper manner in which they are managed. By most farmers they are permitted to stand and ripen offin other words, to mature their seed before being cut. This greatly diminishes their value by rendering the stalks hard and ligneous, and causing the loss of the more valuable portions of the leaves or foliage. All meadow grasses should be cut early, say during the period of inflorescence, or when the larger portion of the crop is in full bloom .-The structure is then suculent, replete with nutritive matters; and if a few quarts of salt be used in packing, the hay will come out sweet, and be eaten by most animals with the same avidity, and nearly the same effect, as timothy hay. We have known sheep carried through the long and severe winters of the north wholly on this feed, and with as good success, generally speaking, as upon any other folder except roots or grain. In salting hay for home consumption, the proper rule to be adopted is to allow no more salt per ton than the animals fed upon it would voluntarily consume during the time required for its consumption. Coarse salt is preferable to fine. The sweating or perspiration of the hay, when put up in a proper state, will insure the solution of the salt.

A VALUABLE HINT.

In the Ohio Valley Farmer a correspondent gives a capital hint to farmers, whose flocks of sheep are troubled with sheep-killing dogs, how to get rid of the said dogs pretty effectually, which we take great pleasure in reprinting for the benefit of farmers generally. It is this:

"If a sheep is killed or crippled by a dog, the night thereafter house up all your sheep and your dogs that you would not have kill ed; then remove the dead sheep out of reach of dogs, first cutting out the liver; or other lean part of it, into which put strychnine a little more than the size of a large grain of wheat; leave that in place of the sheep, and my word for it, next morning you will be almost certain to find the guilty dog near by. If the first night should fail, try again; he will be sure to come back as soon as he is hungry. Again if a sheep is only worried and not killed, any other lean meat will do in place of mutton. By this method you will be sure to get the guilty dog; by the old method of hunting him up, it is very doubtful if you do."

Strychnine can be obtained at any drug store. Care must be taken in handling; as it is the deadliest of poisons.

A THING THAT SHOULD BE DONE.

Many farms have bare spots that will grow neither grass nor weed's Grass seed is thrown away upon them. On such spots spread a little manure in the fall. Harrow in the spring, and sprinkle grass or clover seed upon them. This will sod them over; or, if you wish to do the thing this season, harrow or rake the ground, sprinkle with seed, then cover with straw, and then follow with a light coat of manure (rotted manure) over the straw. This we have seen tried, and it proved efficacious. The two coats are a mulch and the manure adds fertility .-When once a footing is obtained there is no difficulties with such spots afterward.

SCALLOPED OYSTERS .- Take crackers or rusked bread; pound fine; butter a pan, and put in alternate layers of crumbs and oysters, having a layer of crumbs at the top; season them with salt and pepper; and add a little butter and oyster juice sufficient to moisten the whole; bake till brown.

Scald Head, Sore Eyes.

From Harvey Sickler, Esq., the able editor of the Trunchkannock Democrat, Pennsylvania.

"Our only child, about three years of age, was attacked by pimples on his forehead. They rapidly spread until they formed a loathsome and virulentsore, which covered his face, and actually blinded his eyes for some days. A skilful physician applied nitrate of silver and other remedies, without any apparent effect. For fifteen days we guarded his hands, lest with them he should tear open the festering and corrupt wound which covered his whole face. Having tried every thing else we had any hope from, we began giving your Sarsafarallla, and applying the iodide of potash lotion, as you direct. The sore began to heal when we had given the first bottle, and was well when we had finished the second. The child's eyelashes, which had come out, grew again, and he is now as healthy and fair as any other. The whole neighborhood predicted that the child must die."
