PLOWING UNDER GREEN CROPS TVAN FOR MANURE.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune residing in the West, relates the following interesting experiment:

"We have plowed under crops of clover for crops of wheat at various times, and always with good results; but have received more benefit from the first crop turned under green, than from both crops turned under when dry. I prefer the green crop of clover to any other dressing for wheat. In the sammer of 1849 we rolled down and plowed under one acre of oats, when in the milky state, for manure for wheat. On this we sowed two bushels of broom-corn seed and harrowed well. When the broom corn attained an average height of five feet, and as thick on the ground as it could possibly grow to advantage -perhaps ten tons or more to the acre-we plowed that under, too, and sowed wheat. On adjoining land in the same field we cut the oats when ripe, fifty bushels per acre, and hauled all off except the stub ble. This we plowed under without manure or fertilizers of any kind, and sowed with wheat at the same time as the other. At harvest time the land without manure or fertilizers of any kind, had more and better wheat on it, and larger straw, than the land with the two green crops turned under. We have tried the oat crop alone with the same result. Since that time there has been no

This result is a remarkable confirmation of the theory we have so long advocated in regard to the crops we should plow under for the purpose of enriching the land. That theory is, that the cereals, such as wheat, barley, oats, rye, Indian corn, broom-corn, sorghum, timothy grass, &c., abstract from the soil more ammonia than the crop of straw and grain contains after it is g.own. In other words, if we grow a crop of any of these cereals and plow it under, the soil would contain less ammonia than it would if it had been properly summer fallowed. On the other hand, the leguminous plants, such as clover, peas, and beans, do not waste ammonia during their growth. If we grow a crop of clover and plow it under, the ammonia which the plants have abstracted from the soil and received from rains and the atmosphere, will all be retained.

To grow a crup of any of the cereals and plow it under as manure is a most wasteful practice. - Genessee Farmer.

The ashes become very hard and are never you can't find a substitute, I have no doubt wet winter or summer if the weather gives the water the least chance to get away. In summer in five minutes after a shower, there will scarcely be enough moisture to dampen the soles of your shoes. If there is not sufficient ashes for all the walks, commence with the principal ones; and in a couple of years the garden will be complete. Then, each spring after, give them a slight top-dressing of the ashes, which will about consume your

COAL OIL FOR FRUIT TREES.

A gentleman formerly connected with the coal oil business, says that several years ago, in taking a lot of sample bottles of coal oil on a journey for exhibition, he accidentally had a bottle broken, saturating the sawdust in which the bottles were packed. When he arrived at his stopping place he put the sawdust at the foot of a plum tree, it being about the time of blossoming of the plum trees. The result was watched, and it turned out that the circulio, which ravaged the other plum trees in the crchard, gave this one a wide birth, and the plums were saved to Z ripen.

This circumstance led to still further experiments, with like favorable results. The sawdust thus saturate d-which can be done with the cheapest kind of coalfoil-retains the odor for a long time, which is quite offensive to the fastidious tastes of this little pest .-The borer, also, will not put his gimlet into the trunk of a tree which is encircled with Fun is the most conservative element of society, and ought to be cherished and encouraged by all lawful means. People never plot mischief when they are merry.
