VENTILATING HAY-STACKS.

It is not every farmer who has barn-room for all the hay that he cuts, and must necessarily stack some of it out doors. Newlythe stack, is more liable to injury from heating than that which is put into the barn .ed bad weather, or in order to secure hay which is cut near the close of the week, that it is put up before it is thoroughly cured .-Injury from these causes may be entirely never fail to take with him. They will best prevented by excercising a little care in ventilating the stack when it is put up. With this precaution, hay that is quite green will and children should say of him. He never cure finely in the stack, and come out sweet- brought a frown of unhappiness across the er and better than that which too much exposed to the sun in curing. Our practice has been, first, to lay a good foundation for the stack, of old rails or poles, laying two tiers, and crossing them ; then to stand five or six others up in the center, eight feet long, and two feet apart at the bottom, the ends coming together at the top. If these are allowed to extend to the top of the stack, they will be in the way of finishing off, as the stack diminishes. But in order to extend the opening to the top, when the ends of the poles are reached, a round smooth stick is prepared for the purpose and inserted between the ends of the rails at the top, and the stack built up, and as it rises the stick is drawn up, and when the stack is somewhat settled it is taken out entirely. A hole is bored through the end of the stick, and a rope or wooden pin inserted to draw the stick up with. This centre piece may be six or eight inches in diameter; thus feaving an air passage from the bottom to the top of the stack. When the hav has passed through the sweating process, and all danger of moulding is passed, the opening at the top is closed with a cap of straw or hay. This precaution costs but little labor, and is many times compensated by the superior quality of the hay .- Country Gentleman.

HOW TO SHARPEN A SCYTHE.

" Mower" writes to the American Agri éulturist: "To properly grind and whet a scythe requires some little practical skill, in the attainment of which the beginner may be assisted by a few hints. The cutting edge of a scythe or similar instrument, when examined by a microscope, shows numerous fine projecting points or a series of minute wedges which are to be driven into the substance operated on, to seperate the adjoining parts. In order that they may enter the more readily, these points should incline in the direction of the strokes given with the blade of the instrument. In cutting with the scythe, the edge strikes the grass at an angle of forty-five degrees, and hence the grinding should be done so as to have the points set in that direction to the blade. This is done by keeping the blade firmly upon the stone, with the point drawn toward the body of the holder, at the abovementioned angle with the edge of the stone. Commence to grind at the heel and move it steadily along as the work progresses, until the point is reached; then grind the other side in the same manner. Never rub the scythe back and forth then the stone as though endeavoring to whet it. The revolution of the stone will wear away the steel much better than rubbing in this manner, by which the edge is likely to be made rounding, and to be set irregularly. It is preferable to hold the scythe so that the stone will revolve toward the edge. In this way the holder can see when the edge is reached, and the particles ground off are carried away clean. In the opposite method of grinding there is danger of making a " feather" edge, which will readily crumble off, and leave the scythe almost or quite as dull as before. The blade should be ground equally on both sides. In whetting a scythe, lay the rifle or whetstene flat against the side of the blade, and give a light quick stroke downward and forward, in the direction of the edge, so that the scratches it makes shall keep the points set in the same direction as given them by the grinding. By following these simple suggest-ons. a scythe may be made to hold its ed ge twice as long as when the rifle is drawa along the edge almost at random. A few strokes carefully given will enable the workman to keep the right direction and whet rapidly."

SPREADING MANURE FROM THE CART.

In the application of manure as a topdressing for mowing lands, William Bacon writes to the Country Gentleman that he had much trouble in getting it spread evenly and seasonably, so long as he practiced the old plan of dumping it and spreading the heaps afterwards. He now spreads it directly from the cart, and thus states the advantages of that mode :- "We get it on the surface more evenly, and in the aggregate in a less amount of time, and for the third we claim that the sooner the land gets the benefit of it. The only drawback that I know of is, that the team must stand still a little longer while spreading than dumping, but as the team is kept for the benefit of the farm, there is probably no loss of time in

It will freely and fairly discuss all legitimate subjects of newspaper comment, including of course, and pre-emine ntly at this time, all questions connected with the existing unhappy condition of our ountry.

It will seek to awaken the minds of the people to a proper sense of the a tual condition of the Republic—to present to them, truthfully, the fearful perils in which we stand as a nation—to exhibit the magnitude of the task that is before them, if they would check our downward progress—and to inspire them with patriotic determination to apply the REMEDY for our national ills. In brief, it will, in all things, aim to be the faithful exponent of Democratic principles, and to render itself worthy to be an organ of the Democratic party, under whose anepiees our country prospered so long and so well. The restoration of that party—the party of the Constitution and the Union—to power, in the legislative and executive governmen-tal branches of the States and of the Union, we be-

From Harvey Sickler, Esq., the able editor of the Tunckhannock Democrat, Pennsylvania.

"Our only child, about three years of age, was attacked by pimples on his forehead. They rapidly spread until they formed a loathsome and virulent sore, which covered his face, and actually blinded his eyes for some days. A skilful physician applied nitrate of silver and other remedies, without any apparent effect. For fifteen days we guarded his hands, lest with them he should tear open the festering and corrupt wound which covered his whole face. Having tried every thing else we had any hope from, we began giving your Sarsaparella, and applying the iodide of potash lotion, as you direct. The sore began to heal when we had given the first bottle, and was well when we had funshed the second. The child's eyelashes, which had come out, grew again, and he is now as healthy and fair as any other. The whole neighborhood predicted that the child must
