

case. Now to the books. A minister not belonging to Br. Adams' kind of folks, was to preach in the church, and Ad. Adams had him awfully. The minister and congregation got in the church, but there was no Bible on the stand as usual, but the books had been stolen. Adams and his political friends at once set out charging this crime on the ugly Copperheads. Some of the good sisters shed tears of fears over the loss of their books. Isaac told you all about the books, how they were found in the old parson's study. It was noticed soon after that the Bible was again in its place. In fact the man Adams has since acknowledged that the books were in his study. Now in my opinion the man that is mean enough to stoop to tricks so base, would be mean enough to save his own horses tail and then charge it on his neighbors.

Now I think Adams ought to let Isaac alone, way, he is making this place a very badmouthing because my son told the public how it was, through your paper.

This man Adams married a Southern Lady he says: "wife belongs to a good family, with can't do anything that is not Lady like." Will, I will tell you what "wife" does do. While the old man stands in the Presbyterian church preaching for the Methodist congregation, "wife" sits in her pew making snoots at Democrats, the old man all the while stamping and showing the importance of being subject to the "powers that be."

It is not pleasant to publish this kind of neighborhood trials, but I feel that it is about time to expose the living crew. Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue. The good people of Newton have been abused about long enough. I intend to show up the cattle hereafter.

Yours Truly,
ABRAHAM
