A married lady, who was in the habit of spending most of her time in the society of her neighbors, and therefore nearly always out when her husband returned home, happened one day to be taken suddenly ill, and sent her husband in great haste for a physician. The husband ran a short distance, but soon returned anxiously exclaiming, "My dear, where shall I find you when I return?"

If it were only for mere human reasons, it would turn to better account, to be patient. Nothing befalls the malice of an enemy like a spirit of forbearance; the return of rage for rage cannot be so effectually provoking. True gentleness, like an impenetrable armor, repels the most pointed shafts of malice; they cannot pierce through this invulnerable shield, but either fall hurtless to the ground, or return to wound the hand that shot them.

A worthy doctor who was laboring under the delusion that men and women meant what they said, was tempted by a very cordial invitation to call at the house of a lady of very great distinction and honor. The servant opened the door so quick that her voice was heard by Dr. —, saying, "Tell him I am not at home!" His ready wit came to his rescue, for he immediately said in a loud tone to the servant, "Tell your mistress I have not called upon her this morning, as she wished me."

A fashionable lady, arrayed in the greatest amplitude of crinoline, recently went walking with a little son four years of age. All of a sudden she missed the little fellow, and could get no glimpse of him. Her cries of distress soon gathered a sympathizing crowd around her; messengers were dispatched in every direction, and the lady walked slowly and sadly home. As she began to ascend the steps of her mansion a tiny voice exclaimed, "Hold on, ma! let me out!" The little rascal was under her lattice work skirt.

"Ah, John, you won't have me much longer. I shall never leave this bed alive." "Please thyself, Betty, and thee will please me," returned John, with equal equanimity. "I have been a good wife to you, John," persisted the dying woman. "Middlin', Betty, middlin'," responded the matter of fact husband.

Babylon was 60 miles within the walls which were 75 feet thick, and 300 high, with 100 brazen gates. Nineveh was 15 miles by 9, and 40 miles round, with walls 100 feet high and thick enough for three chariot abreast. Thebes, in Egypt presents ruins 57 miles round, it had 100 gates. Carthage was 25 miles round. The Temple Diana, at Ephesus was 425 feet long and 225 broad, with 127 columns, 50 feet high, to support the roof; it was 200 years building. In the ruins of the Temple of Balbec, in Syria, are stone 3) feet long and 9 deep, and three are 58 feet long and twelve deep.

He who, by a straight-forward course of conduct, makes good friends on the one hand and bitter haters on the other gives evidence that there is something of the bold, independent, upright man in his composition: while the chicken hearted, imbecile character is capable of making neither friends nor foes.

If you see half a dozen faults in a woman you may rest assured she has half a dozen virtues to counterbalance them. We love your faulty women, and fear your faultless women. When you see what is termed a faultless woman, dread her as you would a beautiful snake. The power of concealing the defects which she must have, is of itself a serious vice.

A man recently broke off a marriage because the lady did not possess good conversational powers. A wicked editor, in commenting upon the fact, says: "He should have married her and then refused her a new bonnet, to have developed her powers of talk."

There is a man out West who claims to cure disease by laying on hands. That is nothing marvelous. We have ourselves, says the Banger Whig, when young, been cured of crat obliquities by the laying on of the patient hand—severely.

Can any civil engineer inform us how it is that the mouths of rivers are larger than their heads.

Tennyson says that a kiss is merely an ideal pleasure. It may be a mere idea, but it is a touching one.

Our country's best resources are undoubtedly its woman; but its resources should be husbanded.

Why does a sculptor die the most horrible of deaths? Because he makes faces and busts.

Gentlemen who smoke allege that it makes them calm and complacent. They tell us that the more they fume the less they fret.

When is a coquette like a Cupid? When she keeps her beak in a quiver.

When does a man sneeze thrice? When he can't help it.

Envy, jealousy, scorpions, and rattlesnakes can be made to sting themselves to death.
