

Miscellaneous

It is an extraordinary fact, that when people come to what is commonly called high words they generally use low language.

"Did you know I was here?" said the bellows to the fire. "O, yes, I always contrive to get wind of you," was the reply.

Cried Sylvia to a reverend Dean—"What reason can be given, Since marriage is a holy thing, That there is none in Heaven?" "There are no women," he replied, "She quick returns the jest—" "Women there are, but I'm afraid They cannot find a priest."

"Oh, mother! do send for the doctor," said a little boy of three years—"What for, my dear?" "Why, there's a gentleman in the parlor who says he'll die if Jane don't marry him—and Jane says she won't!"

"Ike," said Mrs. Partington, "how do they find out the distance between the earth and the sun?" "Oh," said the young hopeful "they calculate a quarter of the distance, and then multiply by four."

The following is written as a notice on car running on a railroad in the northern part of New York:—"Passengers are requested not to get off the cars to snow-balls while the train is under full headway."

A pung filled with women was observed in Brooklyn, one day last week, and on the outside of the vehicle, in legible letters, was painted "Westboro' Milk Co."

An editor in Maine has never been known to drink any water. He says he never heard of water used as a general remedy but once—in the time of Noah—when it killed more than it cured.

A young lady of California recently broke her neck while resisting the attempt of a young man to kiss her. This furnishes a fearful warning to young ladies. We know from personal experience (in days gone by) it is the Saratoga Republican that speaks—how prone young girls are to perill their precious necks by twisting away from a fellow at a time when, by a judicious exercise, or sit and hold your head steady, perfect happiness would have been shed abroad, and the ambient air made luxuriant with glory. Dear girls, hold your heads steady, and don't break your darling necks!

The following conversation, which took place between a Massachusetts father and his son, who had been missing that morning from the family pew, illustrates the Puritanic idea of free thought and toleration:—"Abimelech, my son," said the father solemnly, as his son came in to dinner,—"Abimelech, have you been to meeting?" "Yes, sir," said Abimelech stoutly; "I've been to the Universalist."

"Well, my son, I sinit like a good many fathers, that don't want their children to go anywhere but just where they say. No, my son, I sinit of one of those. Toleration is my motto—largest liberty, and all that, that our forefathers died for. Yes, my son, go where you please to meeting; I don't care; only this I will say,—that if I catch you going to the Universalist again, I'll take your hide off!"

A few years since the note Tom Marshall was delivering an address before a large audience in Buffalo, when some one in the hall every few minutes shouted, "Louder, Louder." Tom stood this for a while; but at last, turning gravely to the presiding officer, said: "Mr. Chairman, at the last day, when the angel shall wth his golden trumpet proclaim that time shall be no longer; I doubt not, sir, that there will be in that vast crowd as some drunken fool from Buffalo, shouting, louder, louder." The house roared Tom went on with his speech, but there were no more cries of "louder."

The Way to Avoid Calumny.—"If any one speaks ill of the," said Epictetus, "consider whether he hath truth on his side; and if so, reform thyself, that his consures may not effect thee." When Anaximander was told that the very boys laughed at his singing, "Ay," said he, "then I must learn to sing better." Plato being told that he had many enemies who spoke ill of him, said:—"It is no matter; I will live so that none shall believe them." Hearing at another time that an intimate friend of his had spoken detractingly of him said:—"I am sure he would not do it, if he had not some reason for it." This is the surest as well as the noblest way of drawing the sting out of a reproach, and the true method of preparing a man for that great and only relief against the pains of calumny—a good conscience.

A NICE GIRL.—There is nothing half so sweet in life, half so beautiful or delightful or lovable as a "nice girl."—not a pretty or dashing, or elegant girl, but a "nice girl."—One of those lovely, lively, good, good hearted, sweet-faced, amiable, neat, domestic creatures met within the sphere of home, diffusing around the domestic hearth the influence of her goodness-like essence of sweet flowers. A nice girl is not a languishing beauty dandling on the sofa and discussing the last novel or opera, or the giraffe-like creature sweeping majestically through the drawing-room. The "nice girl" may not even dance, or play, and know nothing about coquetting with a fan. She never languishes; she is too active. She is not given to sensation novels, she is too busy. At the opera she is not in front showing her bare shoulders but sits quiet and unobtrusive—at the back of the box, most likely, in fact it is not often in such scenes we discover her. Home is her place
