PRINTING OFFICE RULES.

Make a noise when you come in so that the editor will know you are around.

Button hole the editor and tell him some long winded pointless story; speak loud; when you hear the "typos" rap on their cases, that means "louder."

If there are any "clippings" on the editor's table, look them over and carry off what you like.

Be around when the mail comes in and open the packages, and be sure and carry off all the readable exchanges. This is important.

Pick up everything you see and examine it.

Look over the editor's shoulder when he is writing; he may be writing something private, not for publication, and in that case you wouldn't see it, you know.

If you chew tobacco, spit no where but on the stove, unless you get a good chance at the editor's boots.

As soon as the editor's chair is vacated you must seize and occupy it; if he objects, tell him he is "standing matter," and for the sake of the joke he will forgive you.

Go into the composing room and pick out type from the cases and mix them; it will make you popular with the compositors.

When the press is running, stand around that, your society is so desirable at that time.

Follow the rules closely and the editor will feel so delighted with your society, that, likely as not he will ask you to leave.

BLESSED.

Blessed is he who does not make a cent for he will have no income tax to pay.

Blessed is the bald-headed man, for his wife cannot pull his hair.

Blessed is the homely man, for the girls shall not molest him; yes, truly blessed is he, for when he asketh a lady to dance she shall answer him, saying, "I am engaged to the next set."

Blessed is he who polishes his boots and not his morals, who maketh the outside of his head to shine, and neglecteth the inside thereof; for all the girls shall rise up with smiles at his coming and shall call him beautiful.

Blessed is the man who hath no brains, but brass in abundance, for he shall be the ladies' favorite. Selah!

Blessed is the man who giveth many and costly presents to young ladies, for great shall be his reward—in a horn.

Blessed is the man who is always broke, for no man saith unto him, lend me five dollars.

Down in a shop in Delaware, the men often try to get ahead of each other in the way of hard yards, but it is hard to beat Aleck.—One of the men the other day, who had been on the Ohio, who was speaking of the light draught of some of the steamers out there, when old Uncle Bill spun a long yarn about a steamer he saw down country that could go over any meadow with a light dew on it.

When he had finished, Aleck came in with—

"Oh that is nothing. When I was working at Sam Harlan's last summer, he launched a steamer for Morgan that didn't touch the water by an inch and three-quarters.

An old gentleman who believed in exercise more than drugs, and who chose horse-back riding as the most convenient exercise, on a recent occasion was asked by a medical friend which physician and apothecary he employed, to which he replied: "My physician has always been a horse and my apothecary an ass."

What strange things some girls are! Off or one of them good wages to work for you, and ten chances to one if the old woman can spare any of her girls; but just propose matrimony, and see if they don't jump at the very chance of working a life-time for board and clothes.

An unsophisticated countryman, the other day, coming to Washington, saw a military officer, followed at a respectful distance by two orderlies, in full gallop. "Good gracious," said he, "haven't they caught him yet?" "I was in about three weeks ago, and they were a running arter him then."

"Mother," said Jimmie Spry to her venerable maternal relative, "Sam Flint wants to come courting me to-night."

"Well you jade, what did you tell him?"

"Oh, I told him he could come; I wanted to see how the darn'd fool would act!"

While the late and lamented elephant Hannibal was passing through Maryland an ancient colored lady, who had never seen an elephant, met him on the road, and throwing up her hands in admiration, she exclaimed, "Bress de Lord, what things they do get up fur dis war!"

An Irishman just from the sod was eating some cheese, when he found in his dish many of the said "living" inhabitants.—"De jabers," said he, "dis your chaze in this country be after having childer?"

The following is written as a notice on car-jumping on a railroad in the northern part of New York:—

"Passengers are requested not to get off the cars to snow-ball while the train is under full headway."

A young lady of California recently broke her neck while resisting an attempt of a young man to kiss her. This furnishes a fearful warning to young ladies.
