

Miscellaneous

No one, on merely conversing with a fish ever succeeded in drawing him out.

A man's boots sometimes becomes tight through absorbing water—the man, never.

If breaks are, in poets call them, the most joyous things in nature, what are they always "mourning" about?

A man that everybody knows to be a liar may perhaps be excused for lying. It seems to do him a vast deal of good, and nobody any harm.

At a crowded lecture the other evening a young lady, standing at the door of the church, was addressed by an honest Irishman:

"Indade, Miss, I should be glad to give you a sate, but the empty ones are all full."

An old bachelor is a traveler on life's railroad who has entirely failed to make the proper connections.

Winchell says the people down in Alabama are so hard pressed for eggs, that they have to set their turkeys on Carolina potatoes.

Miss Dobbs says the sweetest line she ever read, was her Simon's name written in molasses on the front stoop.

Don't beat your carpets, poor numb things at all events, it's cowardly to strike them when they're down. If they deserve punishment call in a policeman and let him take them up!

"Come till America, Pat," writes a son of the Emerald Isle to his friend in Ireland; "tis a fine country to get a levin' in. All ye have to do is to get a three-cornered box, fill it wid bricks and carry it till the top of a four-story building, and the man at the top does all the work."

The following are among the notices put up at a petrole town in Western Pennsylvania: "No talking with the chambermaid"—"Fare as high as any other house"—"Not responsible for boots left in the hall"—"No sardines admitted."

A clergyman, at the examination of the young scholars of the Sunday school, put the following question: "Way did the children of Israel get up a golden calf?" "B cause they had not money enough to set up an ox," was the pupil's reply.

"Mamma," said a little fellow whose mother had forbade his drawing horses and ships on the mahogany sideboard with sharp nails, "mamma, th's ain't a nice house." "Why so?" was the reply. "Because at Peter Sicket's we can cut the sofa, and pull out the hair, and ride the shore and togs over the carpet; but here we don't have any fun at all."

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—Yesterday, with joyous spirits, and in gorgeous array, I sailed forth with charming Clara, for a dashing promenade. Ah! what strains of magic power swell the chords of youthful pride, as one trends the walks of fashion with a beauty by his side. Clara, with a grace bewitching, seemed to trip on fairy feet, and each passer turned to view us sailing grandly on the busy street; thrilled my heart with adoration for my fond affection's queen, beating time to mystic rustling of her ermine. Suddenly my charmer faltered, as if shocked by some great ill, while the anguish of her features seemed my inmost soul to chill; lightly on my arm she languished, and I cried in anxious fear:

"Speak once more, darling Clara. Tell me what's the matter, dear?" Methought her gentle form grew lesser by the collapse of her gown, as she sighed in trembling accents:

"Love, my skeleton is down!"

THE POET'S BEDEFFLOW.—In a lately published work by Dr. Brown of Edinburgh, Scotland, we find the following anecdote of the poet Campbell: From Tweedsmuir we walked by the Bield, the old inn, where Mr. Pitt's carriers baited or slept; and could not help recalling a story of "Humphrey Clinker." Campbell, the poet, in his young days, had walked this far, and got snug into his bed after his tumbler of toddy, when there was a knock at his door. "Come in," and behold, with a candle in her hand, stood the pretty maiden who had given him his supper, in her short gown and petticoat.

"Please, sir, could ye tak' a neeber inter yer bed?"

"With all my heart," said the imaginative, susceptible poet, starting gaily up.

"Thank ye, sir, for the M'fat carrier's just come in a' wet, and there's no single ither place."

Up came the huge and reeking man; exit the dainty little woman.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.—A Yankee out walking in Virginia, at Wheeling, while to himself a talking, experienced a feeling—strange, painful, and alarming!—from his head to his knees, as he suddenly discovered he was covered over with bees! They rested on his eyelids, and perched upon his nose; they colonized his forehead, and swarmed upon his clothes. They explored upon his swelling nostrils, dived deep into his ears, they crawled upon his trousers, and filled his eyes with tears! Did he yell like a hyena? Did he holler like a lion? Was he scared, and did he cut and run, or did the critic scold? Ne'er a one! He wasn't scart's mitted, he never swoon'd—nor hollers; but he hidderd him in a nail key tight, and sold em for two dollars!
