Business Outlook.

The season is here when the business world looks hopefully to the future. The nation passed through the presidential campaign without any particular slump in business. The nation philosophically accepted the changed conditions in Washington, and the feeling among the people is that the nation had chosen wisely when Wilson was elected to the presidency. There is a feeling of confidence in him that is very marked, and amidst the constant unrest this can almost be called the era of good feeling. True, the new administration has not gone very far, but so far it has escaped criticism, and President Wilson has shown unusual courtesy to his political opponents. The trend is towards bigger business, and the belief is that the coming years will be years of healthy progress and safe business.

Parent-Teacher Organization.

At last Meyersdale has caught the spirit which should be of much good for the future of our schools. The teachers have borne the heavy load a long time, and it is right that the patrons begin to show a willingness to bear their share of the responsibility. Not only will the parent and the teacher be joined together in bearing the burden, but it cannot help but result in more efficient service in school work and a closer relation of cordiality and harmony existing between the teacher and the parents—and to the benefit of the boy and girl.

Here is an opportunity to help in the work in which all are interested. Boost, don't knock! To make the parent-teacher organization effective, good, substantial work is required, encouragement is to be given, help is to be rendered. Rise up to your opportunities and requirements.

The Yeoman Farmer.

The winter season is about over, and with the cessation of the reign of Boreas, there arises to renewed activity and energy throughout the civilized world that class of men and women which has always been counted the strength and stability of every nation, the bread-giver and the raiment-supplier of the world. That body of men and women is the farmer class, which in the past has not been receiving the recognition which it deserves. Yet that sturdy class of people is enjoying a life of comfort and independence in this day that in the past had been unknown. The life in the past had been more isolated; today with the telephone the farmer can hear his neighbor's voice, and through the newspapers can be as familiar with the news of the world as his city brother. The trolley past his door and the automobile in his garage, his stock fattening and his crops growing while he sleeps makes him cosmopolitan. Of course his work is hard, long hours and many cares, but he is at the top, and deserves the good things that come to him by a kind providence and the sweat of his brow.

The Temperance Cause.

The people of the county in the last month have been drawn up in ranks, sides have been taken, the count has been made. Both elements have been very earnest and possibly somewhat acrimonious. After all, it is not a matter of men arrayed against men, but a cause against a cause, a principle against a principle, a movement that has to do with the conservation of our young men and young women, against a custom in vogue that destroys our young men and young women, a movement that reduces taxes, against a system that increases taxation, a movement that means a sound mind shall dwell in a sound body, instead of a practice that weakens the mental powers and saps the vitality out of the body.

A movement so great, so righteous, that touches every element of human society, that has to do with time and eternity, does not take a backward course. Mistakes may be made by friends, attacks may be made by foes, but the movement is forward and upward. Disappointments may come, weaknesses may show themselves, but right is right, since God is God, and right the day must win. The cause of temperance is so deep-rooted, and so holy, that it will eventually sweep away opposition. Pennsylvania is held in its grasp by the liquor influence, but there is so much pure womanhood and noble manhood in this great state that no human power will be able to hold back many more years the freedom from the saloon domination. The time is now here to gather the forces, conserve the strength for the next battle.

Pull Together.

Life manifests itself in growth, development and expansion. When the tree no longer conforms to the manifestations of life the germs of decay are gaining the mastery over the constructive forces. This may not be so obvious at first, but time will bring the relentless testimony to the eyes of all. The nation, the state, the municipality—all harmonize with this law, and this brings us abruptly to the thought we have in mind with reference to Meyersdale. The natural and encouraging order would be that the population is larger than it was a year ago. If this is the condition of Meyersdale, then all is well. If this is not correct, then it must be that Meyersdale is standing still or retrograding. If it is standing still, then already the disintegrating forces are stronger than the recuperating forces, and if the town is really going back, then the alarm should be sounded and heroic measures should be taken to hold fast the population that we now have and get back what we had before. With the almost ideal location for business, railroads, fuel, water, sites, etc., no better location for business can be found anywhere. The Commercial Club has been at work for many months. There is not much, perhaps, to show for efforts expended, but what is needed is the whole of the population to get to work. Boost the town, boost the business men, boost the business that we already have. We cannot interest foreign capital if we knock the town, knock the business men, and knock the business we now have.

Winston Suit

A Clever Example of the Cut-away Style

LIKE other spring Wooltex models, this suit is as remarkable for the value given at its price as it is for its style and "snap." The rigid severity of the tailoring is relieved by a deft touch at the cuffs and by small self-colored buttons, effectively placed. To be had in staple and novelty cloths, at the moderate price of $25.00.

You will look better in a Wooltex Suit—

Because it is better style—and is so very much better tailored.
