PUBLIC SPRAYING DEMONSTRATIONS.

That a lively interest is being taken in improved methods of horticulture by all wide-awake fruit growers in Pennsylvania is shown by the large attendance at the public spraying demonstrations now in progress in the State Model Orchards, and the directions of Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist or the Department of Agriculture. Several of these meetings are held in each county, so that all who desire may conveniently attend and see the demonstrator spray the trees for codling moth, curculio, and other chewing insects and fungous diseases now infesting, or likely to develop upon the trees later. It is believed that as soon as fruit tree owners realize the possibility of reducing the number of buds, or unsound fruit, grown in their orchard to from 10 per cent., to 2 per cent., the method shown and recommended at these demonstrations will become a matter of general practice. The meetings in Somerset county will be on the following dates:
 Wednesday, May 21st, D. W. Will, Glade.
 Thursday, May 22nd, Somerset County Home, Somerset.
 Friday, May 23rd, J. P. Rhoads, Friedens.
 Saturday, May 24th, Daniel Ott, Windber R. No. 1.

CELEBRATION AT HOOVERVILLE.

John A. Clark first hotelkeeper and always a resident of Hooversville or vicinity on Sunday with a large number of descendants around him, celebrated the 84th anniversary of his birth. There was a big dinner and supper and the balance of the time was spent in an enjoyable social manner. From 35 to 40 children, grand children and great grandchildren were in attendance at the celebration.
 Mr. Clark was born in Hooversville. In his younger days he opened the first hotel ever conducted in Hooversville and run it for years. After middle life he removed to a farm which he worked until he retired eight years ago and then came back to Hooversville to take up his residence. His wife died about 38 years ago and he has since remarried. Eight of his children are living.
 Three years ago Mr. Clark and his twin sister, Mrs. Susan Hoover, together celebrated their 81st natal day. Mrs. Hoover has since died.

WOMEN KNOWN BY JEWELS

Each Article of Adornment is Observed and Carefully Catalogued by Society.
 A woman frequently changes her face and always her gown, while to change her jewels is an event calling for chronicle, Richard Barry writes in the New York Times.
 "Is that Mrs. So-and-So in box?"
 "I heard one woman ask another the other night."
 "Let me see," replied her companion, seizing the glasses. "No. Mrs. So-and-So has sapphires surrounding a pearl in her pendant. That has emeralds. It is Mrs. If-and-But."
 "Who is that next to her?"
 "With the cross of diamonds and the jade stomacher?"
 "No. With the oval brooch set with opals."
 "Oh! That is Mrs. Or-to-Be's brooch, but it doesn't look like her daughter, only she never will let any one wear her opals; lucky for her, unlucky for another' is her idea. What has she done to her face?"
 These women, their dependents and their intimates hold their jewels in the affectionate regard that another group of women might hold their children. The entrance to the circle of each new piece of jewelry is noted and commented on carefully. It undergoes jealous observation at first. Then, if deserving it, it achieves a place and is duly catalogued.
 "Look! There is that little Miss Pretty. It's her first night. She's barely eighteen, and see that string of diamonds. I do think that is rushing it a bit, don't you? They might wait till the second year, at least, for a necklace like that. However, give me your glasses; they are better than mine."
 After a moment she releases the glasses with a satisfied smile. "At any rate," she observes, "they are perfectly matched and just the right size."
 So it goes. Jewels the center of attention; jewels which mark the distinctive elements of personality. From the tiny necklace, which is the joy of the newest debutante, to the sturdy stomacher which is the consolation of the oldest dowager, jewels proclaim, define, limit, differentiate, vitalize and devitalize society.
