FOR CLEVER DRESSING.

Glimpses of Coming Modes—Silks Prominent—'Niniche' Hat, Toques, Vests, Gloves, Veils.

New York, June 20

Half the world of womanhood has come to depend largely on "ready made" for the replenishing of their wardrobes and for the person who plans cleverly so that her things last over well from season to season, there are great opportunities in the clearance sales that offer costumes of all sorts at little above cost, sometimes it's at less. To take advantage of such "occasions" as they call them in Paris, one must know as much as possible of the trend of styles. Which modes are advanced and likely to remain and which have been so overdue that they are practically dead.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

All the "ready made" designers are now getting out Autumn clothes, so that a glimpse behind the curtains is invaluable to the woman who plans ahead. A revival of Louis XV. modes is coming as various signs show. In Paris they are powdering the hair, not much, just a dash but the perrette or queue is predicted by Fall. Neck ruffs are already arrived, and the wearing of a narrow or black velvet ribbon about the throat tied coquettish in a small bow at the left side. Slides of brilliants and tips of the same for the ends of the ribbon are often used. The lorgnette ribbon of velvet or moire similarly ornamented is reckoned extremely smart. There are ribbons for this use of white or black moire, with tiny edges, in contrast. The black with white edges, the white with black borders, that are new and smart not only for the lorgnettes but for the small watch which is worn pocket fashion.

SILK EXCELLENT STYLE.

Silk frocks remain in excellent vogue, so that one is quite sure the Autumn will see them in great use, and silk coats, especially the kind that slope into tails at the back are perfectly in line with coming modes. Yellow or natural tones in gloves are better style in Paris than white and we'll get that fact here shortly too. Long Mousetails are the things with abbreviated sleeves and the more they wrinkle the better they are liked.

VEILS AND GAMPS.

Veils still languish, but there are some enticing showing in the very newest things that are likely to catch on later in the season. There is a new Bulgarian veil, woven with the face part plain and the rest figured, that oculists will surely approve. Silk washable veils for motor use and the travelling reversible veils half plain, half figured, so you can turn either side up or down over the face.

GAMPS AND VESTS.

All sorts of gamps can be had ready to wear with only a tiny bit of adjustment and these are a great convenience for wear with tailor suits, now that low blouses are so universal. Vests are increasingly popular, so much so that the latest and most expensive blouses show vest attachments modeled exactly after a man's garment even to the matching silk back with a strap, only where a man hides his under a coat never removed outside his room, the women's variety are supposed, to be in full sight when the coat is laid off.

NEW JEWELRY.

The latest thing in jewelry are sets of wedding veil pins, which come in pairs made up on platinum in the form of an extra size hair pin, top half circle or open oval set with diamonds or pearls. Hat pins also come in pairs and are small and dainty in their make-up and finish. Send pearl effects, and platinum set with small brilliant rhinestones are very much liked.

Abate the House Fly.

"One of the worst of our common pests is the house fly. This is not because of its great annoyance to mankind so much, as on account of its very filthy habits and its liability to carry disease germs of several kinds that inflict mankind."

One of the subjects of frequent inquiry at the office of State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, is concerning the means of suppressing the house fly, and to meet this he has given out information that is both practical and timely. Some years ago in his Monthly Bulletin of the Division of Zoology he published photographs of the tracks of the fly over a clean culture prepared to develop bacteria, in which the typhoid bacteria and other developed where fly had stepped. He was one of the first advocates of the "Swat the Fly" movement, and continues to urge the abatement of the house fly nuisance.

Screening houses to prevent the entrance of flies is very good, but is only one step in the prevention of much annoyance. Killing and trapping flies in the house should be resorted to, and simple traps will be found very successful.

A safe means of destroying them is to put into an open dish a dilute solution of formalin, from three to five per cent. The flies drink this and are killed. It may be well to sweeten it slightly.

More important than sweetened traps or poisoning flies in the house, and even more important than screening doors and windows, is to destroy their breeding places. Fortunately, in many cities and boroughs there are now regulations requiring that stables be cleaned once every twenty-four hours. In fact, once per week is sufficient as far as the extermination of these pests is concerned. At least once per week all stables, poultry houses and open vaults should be thoroughly cleaned, and then dusted with chloride of lime, or ground phosphate rock or dry lime.

One of the recent important discoveries in the agricultural field is that raw ground phosphate rock, commonly called "floats," can be mixed with stable manure, and will destroy flies, and prevent their multiplication therein, and will also greatly increase the fertilizing value of the manure. To get the best results in this regard about one pound of ground phosphate rock should be used daily for each one thousand pounds of weight of the animals, dusting it over the manure in the stable or as hauled.

ATTACKED BY VICIOUS COW.

Samuel Troutman of Pleasant Union, while returning home from the saw mill of John Shoemaker, recently, was attacked by a vicious cow, owned by Charles Compton. The cow which is dehorned, attacked him, butting him over while near a barbed wire fence and rolled him through the fence, scratching him considerably. Mr. Troutman is a retired farmer and weighs over two hundred and fifty pounds and consequently is not so active on his feet. About a year ago the same cow assailed Mr. Troutman and in all probability would have killed him if his son had not come to his assistance.
