NEW PASSENGER STATION.

The handsome new passenger station of the Western Maryland Railroad Company at Cumberland, Md., has been completed and is now in service. The building is a part of the extensive terminal improvements which were gotten under way by the railroad company at that point some months ago.

The station, which is one of the finest on the Western Maryland System, is three stories high, is of brick and concrete construction. The lower floor of the building is on a level with the railroad tracks. The building will not only house the passenger station rooms, as well as the offices of the train dispatchers. The structure is made more attractive by the Marquise covering.

The interior appointments of the new Cumberland station are particularly attractive. The building is finished throughout with hardwood, with other work in keeping, and contains every modern convenience for the traveling public.

The Western Maryland has expended thousands of dollars in improving its terminal facilities at Cumberland and elsewhere. Work on the station was begun some months ago, and its construction has proceeded without interruption. Other improvements at Cumberland include the construction of a new round-house, machine shop, power house and enlarged freight yards. The freight yards will be completed in the near future.

Climbing Cutworms.

It is not generally known throughout the state of Pennsylvania there exist insects known as Climbing Cutworms which spend the day in the soil in concealment, and in the evening and during the night climb plants shrubs and even trees, and feed on their foliage, and especially on their fruit. Such is the case, and these pests are so numerous as to be very destructive. Fruit growers often find young fruits gnawed into, but do not see the marauder. It is possible to spray with an arsenate spray to destroy these pests, using one ounce of arsenate of lead in each gallon of water or fungicidal liquid. Specimens sent to Prof. H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, Pa., have brought replies as follows: "The insects which you sent us appears to be a cut worm larva. The box had been crushed in the mail and the caterpillar had escaped, but the eaten fruit was received and examined and it indicates the injury by this particular pest. The poison bran mash placed at the foot of the tree will insure protection against this insect, which climbs the tree at night and feeds on fruits and foliage and then goes down and conceals itself during the day.

"Make this poison bran mash by mixing one part of paris green with forty parts of bran when dry and then dissolve some coarse brown sugar or stale molasses in enough water to moisten the bran without making it sloppy. Put a little pinch of this poison bran here and there around the base of the trees or plants to be protected, in the evening and the cut worms will come to it and feed and be killed. It is the best means which I have yet found of protecting garden plants from cut worms.

"A year ago one of my friends, who has a large young orchard, reported that cut worms were destroying all the new growth on his trees, and wished a remedy for this. We found they were the climbing cut worms and recommended this remedy, which he used with immediate and entire satisfaction."
