THE SCHOOL OUTFIT.

Clothes Built on Smart Tailor-made Lines—Party Frocks and Accessories.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

August 2, 1913.

Mothers everywhere are now planning the school outfits that should be in readiness for the Autumn sessions. Summer sports have reduced many of the children's garments to shabbiness, and it is always a question of how best to select the necessary refittings, especially when schools are at a distance from the home which precludes the possibility of trying on and fitting later in the season.

TAILORED LINES.

Clothes built on smart but plain tailored lines are best, being not only more practical and lasting for general school wear, but also more fashionable than fancier models. Materials should be selected to stand continuous hard wear satisfactorily, and with sufficient body to take the tailored finish. Cotton materials now come in so many forms desirable for year-round wear, that fastidious women who require that their children's attire shall be sanitary, as well as good looking, are giving this class of goods preference for general school wear.

Cottons of the best grade come out fresh and attractive after any number of visits to the laundry, and a long coat of warm woolen completely covering the dress, makes this arrangement practical for even the coldest weather.

A WELL SELECTED OUTFIT.

A small, well selected wardrobe proves most satisfactory for school use, especially where children are growing rapidly. This plan gets all possible wear out of each garment before alterations are necessary, a saving of time and trouble that busy mothers appreciate, while the new garment bought at successive stages of the child's development fit and look better than made-over clothes, unless the refitting is done with exceptional cleverness.

ONE-PIECE DRESSES.

For girls under fourteen, one piece dresses are preferred, and the older girls wear them as modishly, though among these the separate skirt with odd shirts and blouses, or with a matching short coat is popular and suitable. There is an endless variety of models for one-piece frocks that are easy to make at home and if the cutting is accurate and finish neatly accomplished, these frocks are as stylish as they are practical.

Where skirts of serge, corduroy or other materials are worn for school, the skirt is almost invariably of a washable material. Cotton crepe, wash silks and striped cottons make up best for these garments, and the belted overblouse that has so largely replaced the "Middy" type this summer will continue its vogue for school wear through the coming season—made up in substantially woven cotton materials, that not only wash well but retain their coloring and shapeliness in the process.

MATERIALS OF QUALITY.

Clever mothers recognize the desirability of selecting thoroughly good wearing as well as good looking material for children's frocks. No matter how pretty or smartly made a child's suit may be if the stuff is so poor that it loses its shape and color after a few washings it is a bad bargain.

Renew Devonshire cloth is woven expressly to meet the demand for a stylish, reliable cotton of firm texture but not too heavy. Heavier than Gingham and lighter than Galatea, which it outwears, it is yarn-dyed, the color woven-in, not stamped, on the fabric, hence it stays fresh looking when other materials are dingy and faded.

In stripes, solid colors, check, and figures in matching tones, it makes the smartest combinations, and the name on the edge guarantees its quality and protects the buyer from inferior goods.

PARTY FROCKS.

Two or three pretty frocks for special occasions are desirable in any girl's outfit, and as these get less wear than the everyday clothes, they last longer and therefore must be altered to keep pace with the child's growth. It is an easy matter to change a fussy frock, for trimmings and accessories in the way of bodices, sashes, or the new vesties and cape jackets all lend their aid in concealing the fact that they are used to cover joinings.

Many of the silk and cotton mixtures and flower printed voiles that cost little except for the making, are most suitable and becoming for girls' wear at the informal dances and small gaieties that they occasionally enjoy.

People who do not have to consider expense in the selection of their children's clothes, prefer dainty little dresses of this sort, which is a help to other people who must count the cost. Flowered muslins appeal to clever managers.

FOOTWEAR.

White buckskin shoes, either in high buttoned styles, or in pumps are a desirable addition to the outfit. These are as easily whitened as canvas, and are smart enough to go with a girl's party dress. Hose to match is always good taste, though lately colored hose is much used with these and with black Colonial pumps.

ITCHING IRRITATION.

Worst form of skin trouble quickly relieved by inexpensive treatment.

When you suffer with any skin trouble, even though the itching seems unbearable, do not think that it is necessary to use some disgusting, greasy ointment. Try Hokara, a pure and simple cream, that is guaranteed to contain no grease or acids and which is so cleanly that it does not soil the linen.

Its power to instantly relieve any irritation of the skin and make it soft, white and beautiful is almost miraculous.

Not only do minor skin trouble like pimples, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, etc., quickly disappear, but the worst ulcers of cases of salt rheum or eczema are cleansed and healed by this wonderful skin food.

In order that any one may try Hokara at small expense at S. E. Thorley's the City Drug Store are selling a liberal jar at 25 cents and in addition guarantee to refund the money if the treatment does not do all that is claimed for it.

For the white frosting use white of one egg, grated rind of one-half orange, one tablespoon of lemon juice, butter size of a nutmeg, and stir thick with confectioner's sugar; spread this on while cake is warm; when cold scrape two squares of unsweetened chocolate, put into a cup and set in a pan of hot water till it melts; pour this quickly over the cream and grease when it begins to harden.
