POULTRY RELISH SKIM MILK

One of Very Best of Foods for Growing Chicks, Keeping Digestion in Good Order.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE)
Very few people understand the value of skim milk as a food for poultry. They relish it and it is very good for them, either sweet or sour or buttermilk, if it is not too cold.

Milk takes the place of meat scraps to a certain extent. In fact, the feeding of meat can be put down one-fourth when the fowls have all the skim milk they can drink, and the results obtained will be the same. Milk is fine to feed laying hens and will materially increase the egg yield.

It is one of the very best of foods for the growing chicks, keeping their digestion in good order and hastening their growth, as it contains the elements necessary for their development.

Where milk is fed regularly and a teaspoonful each of ginger and soda added to each gallon every third or fourth day, there will be no cholera or other bowel troubles. Stir the mixture until thoroughly dissolved before feeding. This is very easily prepared and will keep their digestive organs toned and sweetened.

When fattening fowls, skim milk should be used to mix the mash. They like it better and in this way are induced to eat just as much more, as the milk while serving as moisture to wet the mash is also a hearty food.

The food for young ducks should be mixed with milk and curds made from sour milk are indispensable for young turkeys.

Remember that milk will not take the place of water, as it so soon turns to solid food in the crop. Keep water before the chickens the same as ever, no matter how much milk they may have.

On every farm there is more or less milk for feeding and it will pay to see that the chickens get their share of it.

SPROUTED GRAIN FOR FOWLS

Green Food May Also Be Supplied in Form of Any Surplus Supply of Vegetables on Hand.

Where it is possible a winter crop should be planted to furnish green food for the fowls. It does not take a large area to furnish green food for the fowls, and usually plenty of space may be found for this purpose. But where one has only a city lot, and a green crop is out of the question, arrangements should be made to sprout oats, rye, wheat or barley. If no other space is available a box of soil will suffice. The box may be filled with rich garden loam if the seeds are to remain long enough for the plants to grow. If the grain is to be fed as soon as the seed sprouts a box of sand is sufficient. The box may be set in a cellar or in the kitchen near the stove in very cold weather.

Green food may also be supplied in the form of any surplus vegetables that you may happen to have on hand. The best plan for feeding them is to place a nail in the houses on the wall just high enough so that the hens will be compelled to jump a little to reach it. Then take a beet or any other vegetables that you desire to feed and stick them on the nails. It is a handy little arrangement, and compels the fowls to exercise for their food.

PREVENT CROWDING ROOSTS

Difficulty Encountered Where Many Birds Are Kept Together is Handily Eliminated.

When a great many chickens are roosting together the tendency is to crowd until a part of the fowls are pushed off the roosts. Roosts made as illustrated will guard against this trouble, says a writer in the Missouri Valley Farmer.

Pegs Stop Trouble.

Bore holes in roosts about three feet apart and drive in upright pieces 12 inches high and about the size of a broom handle. It is well to have a dropping board beneath.

"Fresh Egg" Defined.

An egg to belong to the strictly fresh egg class, should not be over 3 days old in summer weather, and a week old during the winter. But in either case they must be kept in a cool temperature. Heat very quickly stales eggs. Crates of eggs allowed to remain in the hot sun for several hours will quickly change their condition.

Turkeys for Market.

The hen turkeys sell first, and medium-sized carcasses sell best in market. The market turkey should be shorter in legs and neck than is ordinarily the case, and very full in the breast, with a compact body, meaty and fat, rather than of a large size and coarse structure.

went a handsome cot to repair the financial standing of his family.

With the advent of the Italian, impecunious as his rival, Arnold's pains and pangs began. The evident pleasure evinced by Leonard pere in having a nobleman as a sutor in his daughter's train acted not as a balm for the wounds of the young broker. It was bad enough for him to know that it was the Count Rivoli who almost nightly enjoyed the hospitality of the Leonard mansion or occupied a seat in a box beside the charming Dolly, without having insult added to injury by the presence of the Italian fortune seeker as one of the motoring party. As the afternoons passed in speeding over the roads, with Arnold bound the

New England Romance.

From Boston comes the story of a touching phonograph romance. The manager of a store became infatuated with the voice of a young woman whose singing he heard reproduced frequently in the machines, wrote to her for her pictures, and the acquaintance speedily ripened into marriage. The bride, by the way, was intending to study in Paris for grand opera, but has decided to settle down in New England.—San Francisco Argonaut.

True Philanthropy.

"Really," began the collector, I cannot understand why a man of your resources will refuse to pay his honest debts." "Then I'll tell you," said the well-to-do citizen, confidentially, "if I paid up I'd throw you and several others out of work, and I haven't the heart to do it."—Satire.

could With a Large Degree of Satisfaction Be Made to Take the Place of Meat.

In America, unfortunately, cheese seems to be regarded more as a luxury than as a staple article of diet, yet one pound of cheese is equal in food value to two pounds of meat. It is rich in both protein and fat. Considering this, its price is very low, and it ought to do good service in the place of meat. Its food value is fully recognized abroad. In Switzerland and to a great extent in Germany and Italy, cheese is a part of the daily food given to the outdoor laborers in the place of meat. A great advantage in using cheese, and one that should appeal strongly to the overworked housewife, is that it is generally given uncooked. There is some doubt as to the digestibility of cheese. It is claimed by noted German scientists that, when taken in the usual quantity—from one-fourth to one-half pound daily—and by people who lead an active outdoor life, it is about as easily digested as meat. For the average person, who takes but little outdoor exercise, cheese is hard to digest. This is true of most kinds as purchased in our market, but the home-made cottage cheese, often called clabber cheese, is an exception. This dish is easy to prepare and is very economical where there is a home supply of milk. It is a good way to use up the overplus of sour milk on the farm. Cottage cheese makes a nice tea or supper dish, and is so palatable and nutritious.

Chinese scholars who are dissatisfied with the ideographic characters in which their language has always been written have set out to form an alphabet, which they hope to see gradually adopted by their countrymen.

According to a writer in the New York World, Chow Hi Chu, secretary of the Chinese legation at Rome, assisted by Messrs. Wan and Chou, secretaries, and by Signor Rivetta, professor of Japanese and Chinese at the Oriental institute of Naples, is at work on the project. The latter gives this description of the alphabet that has resulted from their labors:

"To represent exactly all the sounds of the Chinese language, we had to draw upon almost all existing alphabets. The alphabet we have composed consists of 42 characters, of which 23 are vowels and 19 are consonants. Of the vowels, four are taken from the Greek, four from the Russian, five from the Latin and one from the Chinese. Of the nine others, two are what we call 'modified' or 'prolonged,' and seven are reversed.

"Of the consonants, 14 are taken from the Latin, three from the Russian and two from the Greek."—Youth's Companion.
