Results of Proper Orchard Treatment.

A Lancaster County farmer who knows how to grow big farm crops has started growing peach trees, and has written to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, Penna., a detailed description of his method of growing trees and fertilizing during the summer and fall, and asks if he is right in doing so. For the sake of putting him on the right track Professor Surface has been obliged to tell him to change his methods, and has given some information which may prove helpful to persons who have been stimulating their trees to growth that is too rank, especially late in the fall.

The reply is as follows:

"Concerning the treatment of the soil around your peach trees, I can say that you are going about it as near blindly as a man can. I can not see much method or scientific principle back of what you are doing. You should not go forward in an expensive and rash manner without yourself understanding the principle of soil treatment. This is no time of year to apply nitrate of soda. It will push the growth when you do not want it. Apply it in the spring when it is needed. On such soil as yours it should not be needed at all.

"I cannot understand why you wish to use fertilizer at this time of year. There is so much about orchard management that you do not know, and that you should know, that I cannot write a book on it at the present time. I am sorry for you but for your own sake I want to tell you the truth. I do not wish you to think I am writing to you in a disrespectful manner, but you do not understand the principles of soil management in an orchard, and you should study this subject thoroughly first.

"Cut out the fertilizer business, sow crimson clover or vetch as a clover crop this winter, turn it down in the early spring, and keep it clean cultivated. Prune your trees lightly this summer, prune them heavier this winter. Spray them with the boiled lime-sulfur when dormant for scales and other insect pests and plant diseases, and with the self-boiled lime-sulfur and arsenate of lead just after the husks fall in the spring, and if they are going to have Brown Rot spray with the self-boiled lime-sulfur solution for this. The formula for all these preparations are in my Bulletins which are sent free of charge to every one who wants them.

"Come and see my orchard this year, with a crop of 20,000 or 30,000 baskets of peaches, due to the treatment discussed above. No money was spent on fertilizers, no labor was lost by work at the wrong time of year. I can deliver the goods if ever this year and show that my methods are correct. If any man in Pennsylvania can show a larger or better crop of peaches than mine, I shall travel across the State to see it, but at the present time I do not know where it is to be found. This is the result of careful study of the needs of the trees, and proper handling of them, rather than lucky conditions or circumstances."
