HELD FOR COURT.

Frederick Rowe, of Meyersdale, was held for court Saturday morning on a charge of perjury preferred against him by Levi Deal, of Butler, after a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace A. Kent Miller.

Rowe is charged with swearing falsely in connection with 110 shares of stock in the Erie Coal and Coke Company at a meeting of that company held last month in Butler. It is alleged that Rowe swore he owned the stock when Deal attempted to vote it. Rowe claims he merely put it up as collateral at the Farmer's Bank, which was conducted by S. D. Livengood, some years ago and that H. M. Berkeley, who has been missing from the county for over a month, who was Livengood's assignee, sold the stock to Deal illegally.

Rowe claims that the stock was sold to Deal, by Berkeley for $50 per share, notwithstanding the fact that Deal purchased stock in the same company shortly afterwards for $60 per share. Rowe contends that if his stock was sold at all he should have received for it at least as much as its market value.

Rowe gave bail in the sum of $1,000 for his appearance at December criminal court. His bondsman is former County Commissioner William N. Moser.

County Cases Argued at Pittsburgh.

The right of a railroad company to take water from a stream running through private property at a point where the railroad had acquired a right of way for tracks across the stream, was argued before the Supreme court in the case of the Markleton Hotel company against the Connellsville & State Line Railway Company, appellant, from a decree of Somerset county, restraining the railway from using the water.

The railway company claimed that the water was not noticeably diminished and that they had a right to use the water for their engines.

Among other cases argued were these: Improved Traction Engine company, appellant, against M. Christner, Somerset county, action over the cost of an engine; D. B. Zimmerman against the B. & O. railroad company, appellant, Somerset county, from a verdict for railroad ties purchased.
