SPECIAL COURT.

The October special term of court began on Monday, and will continue for three weeks, with one week's intermission over election week. Judge Reed of Jefferson county is assisting Judge Ruppel in an attempt to clear up the calendar.

The first case in which a jury was one involving a number of complainants vs. the Western Maryland railway company and growing out of condemnation proceedings when the Western Maryland was run through Somerset county.

These cases have been up for trial several times before but in each instance something occurred that necessitated their continuance. The jury went to Rockwood to view the damage and returned at noon to proceed with the trial of the cases. The plaintiffs are: Werner, Shober et al., Central Savage Brick company and Emanuel Statler. Judge Reed on Tuesday tried the cases.

In the interim of the jury viewing the premises, Judge Reed tried the cases of R. K. Walter vs. Isiah Good.

Before Judge Ruppel, after a jury was drawn in the case of Burnworth vs. the L. O. O. F., of Confluence, the court allowed a continuance of the case, with permission to enter a voluntary non-suit or amend the pleadings.

Domberry vs. Louis Brehm; Darrell vs. C. M. Cunningham; Snyder vs. Carver.

The case of Peter Wyszynski vs. Consolidation Coal company was settled.

The cases of J. H. Berkey vs. the Western Maryland Railway company and Wright vs. J. F. Reich, Burgess of Meyersdale were discontinued.

The Connellville & State Line is a subsidiary of the Western Maryland railroad company and built the latter's road between Connellville and Cumberland. In skirting the southern portion of Somerset county, the new line, it is alleged, cut off the tracks of the Viaduct Coal company, among other properties condemned along its right-of-way.

The construction of the railroad, it is alleged, rendered practically useless the Viaduct company's large double deck steel bridge across the Casselman river, over which the output of the coal and fire clay mines were hauled, in addition to putting out of commission an inclined plane haulage system by which the coal and clay were transported to the bridge.

The Viaduct concern's mines are among the most ideally located in the state, it is said, and present a novel appearance from a geological point of view. Their holdings include a precipitous mountainside immediately south of the Casselman river. Up this natural incline the various coal measures five or six in number outcrop, one above the other separated in some instances by valuable deposits of fire clay and other minerals. The company's operations show, it is averred, where the hill was worn down in the glacial period of the earth's history, giving a layer cake appearance, the formation of which is claimed to have expedited the removal of the minerals, before the unique mining plant was destroyed and cut off from the market by the construction of the railroad.
