LESSON IN GEOGRAPHY.

The following article shows how a certain successful teacher developed a lesson in Geography. It seemed so good that it is worth passing on to others.

As the teacher assigned the lesson she said "Each of you has a city now, and I offer this guide in the preparation of your work." She pointed to the board on which was written—Where is your city? Why was it built in that particular locality? Prove to us that your city is of great importance in the world.

The teacher remarked that the lesson would be in the form of discussion and pointed out sources of additional information. This teacher informed her visitor that she and her pupils were studying the countries from an international standpoint. They were finding out how every country is dependent upon every other country today for something—why there should be peace among all.

In the assignment—the lesson was on the British Isles—three pupils were given London, three Leeds, etc.

When the class met next day for recitation no time was wasted. A map had been sketched on the board—a mere outline, free hand. On the board the names of the city had been written with wide spaces between. When London was called, one pupil with crayon, marked its position on the map. Each told all he had found about the city—its position on the Thames, its nearness to other countries, the famous abbey and other buildings of interest. One member of the class produced some pictures of buildings in London which were shown to the class. All of these points were recorded on the blackboard under the name of London.

Manchester was taken up in the same way. This is the greatest cotton cloth manufacturing city in the world. Twenty-five thousand miles of cloth are made there every year. Great cargoes of cotton (the teacher interrupted to ask, "From where?") from the U. S. and Egypt go to Manchester on the ship canal by way of Liverpool.

Here some one said, "So Manchester depends in her shipping upon my city, Liverpool." Another said, "Or my city, London, for London isn't so far from Russian, German and Scandinavian markets." The Manchester was quick to answer, "Could Liverpool's commerce be so great if it were not for Manchester's factories?" Sheffield and Leeds spoke up and showed how they also contributed to the prosperity of Liverpool and London. Then one of the London pupils produced "Old Curiosity Shop," and said, "Everything is not from the money side. It was Dickens and Tennyson and others who lived in London and gave us so much wonderful literature."

All agreed that this was a good point. Next Belfast was called. Everyone looked full of expectation. No response. Then one boy said, "I can't boom Belfast much because I'm for Leeds, but they do make the finest linen in the world there."

Then began the discussion as to where these articles were sold, the ports entered, the articles bought in return, etc.

At the close of the lesson the teacher asked, "What, to you, was the most important point in this lesson?" Suggestions were given and these which seemed to stand out most prominently were recorded upon the board. (1) All nations are, in some way, dependent upon all other nations. (2) Peace and good will are strong factors in the exchange of products and ideas.

The conduct of the lesson has this suggestion for teachers, that the work was coming out of the pupils and they were enjoying the process. The teacher merely directed and offered suggestions.

BROUGHT SUIT AGAINST MARYLAND CASUALTY COMPANY.

The Farmers National Bank, of Somerset, on Tuesday brought suit to recover the sum of $20,000 from the Maryland Casualty Company, of Baltimore, Md., the amount of the bond furnished by Henry F. Barron, late cashier of the bank, who committed suicide by shooting himself in the right temple on September 11, 1913.

The bank alleges that the defendant furnished it a bond in which the casualty company agreed to reimburse the plaintiff to the extent of $20,000 for loss of moneys, securities, or other personal property it might sustain by any dishonest act or acts committed by Barron, the plaintiff bank's cashier in the performance of his duties during a period of three years, from September 4, 1910 to September 4, 1913.

The bank states that it has paid all premiums on the bond, amounting to $160, and complied with all other requirements of the bond, but alleges that the bonding company was notified of such shortages on March 14, 1913.

Barron was prosecuted for embezzlement by the bank in the U. S. district court, but committed suicide before the day of his trial. An interesting question of the bonding company's liability now arises, as it was understood that the bank would have to convict Barron of the offense charged before it could recover the amount of the bond, which is less than half the amount alleged to have been embezzled.

To further complicate the matter there are rumors that apparently are believed by some, although the same may be groundless, to the effect that Barron merely simulated suicide.

In view of such stories which have been spread far and wide in various ways, it is not unlikely that Barron's body may be exhumed. He was interred in a private mausoleum at a cost of about $500.

LADIES. READ MY OFFER CE-UTA, a Long Looked For Remedy
Looked for by thousands of sufferers—one that is needed by the young and the aged. It is no new remedy; I have used it for 18 years in my private life. It is one of my favorite formulas, and a successful one; one that I can always depend upon. Much of my success I attribute to its use.

CE-UTA is so good, so much needed, that I have decided to offer it to my suffering friends. It will do the work. Read what it is for.

Women who are pale, thin, yellow, dark circles under the eyes, swollen eyes, chronic, dry, headache, backache, pain in the loins, pain in the brain, bearing down dragging sensation, tired feeling, loss of ambition and memory, poor circulation, dependency, all respond to this wonderful medicine.

Painful periods absolutely disappear after one or two months treatment.

CE-UTA brings back energy, fresh youthful looks to the care-worn faded person. It carries away corrupt, impure material from the blood, and in its place makes new and good blood. "It makes life worth while."

I attribute my own health and youthful appearance to the use of CE-UTA.

Young ladies and young men who are delicate and undeveloped, with loss of energy will find CE-UTA a wonderful medicine. It brings back that taut to the cheeks, brightens the eyes, fills out the sunken places in the face and body, clears away the muddy color and the pimples. The walk is brisk because new life is taken on.

CE-UTA is all that I claim. Those in years who have used and are patrons of CE-UTA, attribute their health and youthful appearance to its use. After one week's trial you will notice a difference in your appearance.

In order to introduce it I make this liberal offer. For one dollar and six postage I will send you a plain package one month's treatment.
