Destroy Peach Yellows Promptly.

A peach grower in the eastern part of Pennsylvania wrote to State Zoologist, H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, saying, "We planted a small area to peaches here and expect to make a larger planting in the spring, but discovered extensive yellows in our trees. We were told that you had succeeded in pulling trees through the yellows and bringing them back to normal. If this can be done we will go on planting."

To this letter Professor Surface replied as follows:

"While in my own orchard I have apparently cured trees of yellows, I can not say that others can do so, and do not therefore, find it best to hold out any hope to persons in vicinities where this disease is to be found. Plant pathologists at present consider it incurable. I must accept the statements of specialists in this line, as it does not belong to science of entomology or zoology, which is my speciality. While I believe I have cured it, and I am yet working on this proposition, it is not far enough developed for me to say to others that they can do the same, and your surest method is to accept the teachings of the specialists in plant diseases, who regard it as incurable, and who say that as soon as a tree is infested it should be torn out and burned. I certainly do not recommend continued planting of peach and plum in the vicinity of peach yellows, unless a person is prepared to undergo the inevitable loss that will come. By all persons in one region uniting in the agreement to pull and burn the diseased trees at once, it can be kept in check."
