A GOLD BASIS BILL

SENATE COMMITTEE STRIKES OUT "LAWFUL MONEY" PHRASE IN NEW CURRENCY MEASURE.

FINANCIER UTTERS WARNING

In Chamber of Commerce Speech Schiff Recalls Warning He Made in 1906—Panic Followed Next Year—Committee to Washington.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency made further important changes in the Administration currency bill.

It decided 2 to 1 to strike the words "or lawful money" from the bill wherever they occur, thus making the reserve requirement solely of gold.

Four Democrats voted to retain the words "or lawful money." They were the chairman, Senator Owen, and Senators Hollis, Pomerene and Shafroth. These four by repeated votes in support of the features of the House bill have come to be known as the Administration Senators in the committee.

All Republican members of the committee and the three Democrats—Senators O'Gorman, Hitchcock and Reed—voted to strike the words from the bill.

These words have been the ground of much complaint from the bankers of the country. By this action the committee put the currency measure on a really gold basis.

Wilson's Currency bill is materially amended by coalition of Hitchcock and Reed, Democratic Senators, with five Republicans of the Senate Banking Committee.

This coalition decides that stock in regional banks should be raised by popular subscription, the stock not absorbed by the public to be taken up by member banks in the system.

Government control of the regional banks is provided for by means of a majority of directors named by the Government through the Federal Reserve Board.

It is proposed that the new currency be Treasury notes and obligations of the United States loaned to the banks. In this particular the coalition adopts the Administration plan.

Schiff Issues a Warning.

New York, Nov. 7.—With impressive earnestness, weighing each word he uttered, Jacob H. Schiff, head of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., warned the opponents of the pending currency bill that if reform legislation should fall of passage the country "would face very difficult conditions."

Mr. Schiff was exceedingly careful to avoid alarming terms in his speech before the Chamber of Commerce, but that he meant to imply that the country might suffer from another panic was plain from his own comparison of the occasion of his present warning with one he made on the floor of the same chamber in 1906. There was a panic the following year.

"If the currency legislation to regulate the money situation is not successful it will be very serious," said Schiff, carefully selecting his words.

"Good citizenship must take the place of partisanship on this important question if the prosperity and the happiness of the people is to be attained."

When he had finished the Chamber unanimously passed a resolution offered by A. Barton Hepburn, president of the Chase National Bank, to send a special committee to Washington to confer with Congress on currency legislation.

The movements of the smaller vessels will be under the direction of the commander of the squadron.

CANAL BUILDERS RUSH HOME

Exodus Begins as Great Waterway Nears Completion—Workmen and Families Returning to Homes.

Panama, Nov. 7.—There are six ships in the service of the United States Government between the Isthmus of Panama and New York, and each one that leaves the Isthmus these days is filled with canal builders and their families returning to their homes in the United States, because their part of the canal work is finished.

From 25 to 40 families go on every ship, and it is estimated that by the end of November at least 1,000 of the 5,000 American canal workers will have left the Isthmus for good. The exodus is caused by the completion of dry excavation in Culabra Cut and the practical completion of construction work for all the locks and dams.

The proportion of foreign laborers on the canal to American employees is about 10 to 1, and these also find themselves cut from the payroll by the completion of various parts of their work. During the next two months it is estimated that 10,000 negroes, 1,000 Italians and 2,000 Spanish laborers will leave the Isthmus.

He has been most unpopular in Bulgaria since the termination of the war and it is stated that he has received many letters threatening him with death, while placards with words "to let" have been posted on the walls of the national palace at night.

NICKNAMES OF THE GREAT

Noted Men, Like Prize Winners of the Turf, Have What Might Be Called "Stable Names."

Some day, when at last I have obtained my divorce and ceased to toll, I am going to devote my leisure to a thesaurus of the stable names of the great. You know what a stable name is, of course. You know that a racing mare called Zarina Olga Fedorova in the dope sheets is not Zarina Olga Fedorova in the stable, nor even Zarina or Olga, but usually plain Lil or Jinnie. And you know, too, that a prize bulldog called Champion Zoroaster II, on the bench is often plain Jack or Ponto in the kennel. So with the eminent of genus homo, Owen Hatteras writes in the Smart Set. The official style and appellation of the late King Edward VII. was Edward, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Dominions Beyond the Seas, King, Emperor of India—but his wife called him Bertie. And the wife of Kaiser Wilhelm calls him Willie.

But what of even greater men? What was Ibsen's stable name? Did his wife call him Henrik formally, harshly—or did she tone it down to Hen, Henry, Harry, Erik or Hank? And Bismarck? Did the Fursten ever call him Otchen? Or Ottily? Both favorites at the German heart! And Tolstoy? By Russian custom he was Leo Nikolajevitch to his friends—but was he ever Lee or Nicky to the courtiers? What was Grant to his wife? Certainly not Ulysses, an inhuman, impossible name! And Napoleon I? And Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart? And Honore Balzac? And Robert Browning? Was he ever Bob? And John Wesley? Was he ever Jack? And Emmanuel Swedenborg? Was he ever Manny?
