Brown tulle is introduced on many of the evening gowns.

Most of the smart gowns have sashes of a contrasting color.

Small buckles are used to fasten vest effects on the new spring suits.

Gaiters or shoes with cloth uppers are worn with street costumes. White, tan, gray, and black are the popular colors for gaiters.

Accordion pleating is much favored for all kinds of bouffant robes.

The sleeveless and gloveless arm is one of fashion's latest innovations.

For formal occasions the large hat of velvet or moire reigns supreme.

Almost any color or any two or three colors may be made into one dress.

A very taking neck finish is a pleated maline frill, with large yellow beads.

Jet is extremely fashionable, and it trims some of the toques for early spring.

Very smart hats are trimmed with a crown of little tips placed at the edge of the hat or at the back in a retreating movement.

One of the latest velvet toques has a brim fitting close to the crown which runs into a peak of considerable height. There is no trimming.

Among the novelties are blouses of chiffon embroidered with colored silks, the material or embroidery repeating the color of the costume.

In neckwear there is a tendency to substitute organdie, sheer linen, batiste, or other plain wash fabric for the laces, tulle, and embroideries.

POULTRY NOTES

The biggest hen is not the business hen.

Charring corn is one way of providing charcoal for fowls.

Don't expect to win every prize that you compete for this fall.

Some breeds are easier plucked than others. This makes a difference.

The hen needs a balanced ration, the same as the cow or the man.

Broken charcoal is a fine conditioner for birds of all ages at all times of year.

It is the abuse and not the use of corn that condemns it as a poultry food.

It is very poor economy to inbreed to save the expense of buying new roosters.

Air slaked lime sprinkled on the floor and on the dropping boards will help to keep the place healthy and the air pure.

Worth Knowing.

Burning accidents would be comparatively rare if mothers would have alum put in the last rinsing water for children's pinafores, nightgowns, etc., when these articles are washed. Two ounces of alum to each gallon of water is the right proportion to make the garment non-inflammable, and it should always be used for garments made of the common flannelette, for otherwise this is so likely to catch fire that the wearer of it is in danger of being burned to death. Fires are often caused by muslin curtains being blown by the wind against lighted candles or gas, so it is wise also to rinse such draperies in alum water.

The stock pot is the mainspring of a well-managed kitchen. In it should be collected bones, poultry, carcasses, trimmings and vegetables, for any scrap is welcome. A piece of shins beef may sometimes be added for extra strength. There will be no lack of soup, gravy and sauces if this is kept constantly going; it is the foundation for them all.

If you scorch a garment when ironing it, rub a lump of dry starch on the mark, then sponge it off. Repeat until the yellow disappears. The secret of an especially delicious omelet served in a certain home fell out the other day. More yolks than whites are used and a little rich cream goes in when it is to be plain or is to be seasoned with cheese.

Put up several shelves six inches wide over the drainage table of the sink. In wiping the dishes taken from the plate drainer place them in piles, the same kind together, on the shelves. This happy thought saves steps in wiping the things and at the end the already sorted dishes can be put away in the pantry with the least effort.
