Prepare to Spray for the Apple Aphid.

There has been a great deal of discussion about the efficiency of the lime-sulphur solution in destroying the Apple aphid or Green plant louse. State Zoologist Surface, at Harrisburg in his experiments and demonstrations has proven conclusively that the lime-sulphur solution applied as for San Jose scale just after the leaf buds of the apple burst in the spring will destroy this pest. A great deal depends upon the material and more depends upon the time it is applied.

Persons who wish to make their own lime-sulphur solution for this spraying should order sulfur and lime soon and make the material during the bad weather when the item of time will not enter extensively into the expense account. It is made by boiling two pounds of sulfur with one pound of lime in one gallon of water in any kind of vessel excepting copper, for three fourths of an hour. This is stored away until the orchardist wishes to use it and is then diluted with six or seven times its bulk of water, just as for the San Jose scale. In applying it after the leaves expand in place of the Bordeaux mixture he should use one gallon of this concentrated material in forty gallons of water.

A York county orchardist sent some apple twigs to Professor Surface, at Harrisburg, and asked him about the black specks on them. The reply contained full information upon the best and cheapest method of destroying the Apple aphid for which orchardists should make preparations at once. It is as follows:

"Upon examining the apple twigs which you sent us we find the eggs of the apple aphid present. You will have no trouble in destroying it if you will spray with the strong Lime-sulphur Solution just as for San Jose scale immediately after the buds burst, and when the green leaves commence to show and are more than one quarter of an inch in length. Remember it is before the leaves expand, and when they first peep out of the buds. We have proven in this office that this is a good and satisfactory remedy for the apple aphid. There can be no doubt of this after the extensive experiments which we have performed, proving these facts conclusively.

"Please remember that it is possible to spray with the same material for the apple aphid and not have good results, owing to spraying before the eggs hatch, and thus while they are in such a resistant condition that the spray liquid will not kill them. For example, I believe that spraying now, even with very strong Lime-sulphur Solution, or with any other strong spray material, will not be sure to kill all of these aphid eggs, and consequently would have unsatisfactory results. Fortunately for the fruit grower, the eggs hatch very early in the spring, when the young dark-green aphids or plant lice at once crawl to the leaves that are commencing to appear from the tips of the buds. This is the time to spray them with strong Lime sulfur Solution, even if it should scorch a few of the leaf tip, as I have done in my own orchard a great many times. It results in no permanent injury, and is much better than to let the aphid remain unchecked.

"These pests sink their sharp beaks into the tissue of the leaf and inject a poison, stunting the growth of the leaf and causing it to curl. This curled leaf gives them protection from outside agencies, and it becomes impossible to reach them with spray liquids at any possible time during the entire summer after the leaves are large enough to curl.

"In spraying with strong Lime-sulphur Solution made at San Jose scale strength, you have the advantage of killing not only the plant lice and the San Jose scale, but also other insects, such as Tent Caterpillars, and also fungus diseases of various kinds."

Community Courtesy.

Courtesy in the home is a mark of good breeding.

Courtesy in the community is an evidence of good citizenship.

The exercise of courtesy produces profitable relations in society, in business, in community life.

Why do people patronize a particular store in your town? One reason is because the owner and his associates appreciate the value of the pleasant smile and the kindly word.

Why is one town a better trading town than another? One reason—perhaps the principal reason—is because the people are graciously disposed to the stranger, the street car conductors are pleasant mannered, the policeman on the corner solicitors of the public welfare and ease.

Think now, the best town of your acquaintance is the town where you have had the best treatment, where your experience with the people has been the most agreeable.

ADVANCE FASHIONS.

Attractive Fifth Avenue Styles
—Spring Suits—Hats of Moire, Taffeta and Tagal
Braids—Georgette Sailors.

The above designs are by The McCall company, New York. Designers and makers of McCall Patterns.

New York, Feb. 6

Things are humming in the fashionable world, and nearly all the advance sartorial models have been launched at exclusive establishments whose patrons demand the latest and smartest creations. Fifth Avenue rivals the Rue de la-Paix in Paris as a centre where women go to find artistic productions. The greater number of the styles shown originated in Paris, but the most successful have been modified to make them practical for the demands of women here. The American point of view is quite different from the Parisian. The majority of the best dressed women here want clothes that will not only look attractive but last well, and give enough service to make them worth while.

ADAPTABLE STYLES.

The multiplicity of advanced models shown for present and coming wear, gives every type of woman a chance to secure style and becomingness in her selections. A very few pieces, if well chosen, can be made to afford considerable variety. A woman going down to Aiken for a short stay made her purchases with an eye to their usefulness here during the Spring and Summer. Her suit of dark powder blue broadcloth, with one of the little, odd slashed coats, short and cut away in front, and with a longer back. The only ornamental feature outside of the crystal buttons, was a yest of white pique. Blue, by the way, will be exceedingly popular especially in the dull soft shades known as "petroleum" or "powder" blues.

AN AFTERNOON DRESS.

An afternoon gown was of changeable blue and black taffeta, made with a prettily draped skirt, with the fashionable over tunic arranged so that it could be worn or not as desired. Straps of the silk in bretelle shape, running over the shoulder and fastening at the waist front or back were also adjustable, and a little monkey jacket in blouse form could be worn with its matching skirt, with the cloth skirt, or with several cotton frocks and skirts in this outfit.

A PRETTY BLOUSE.

A blouse of blue chiffon over white net, the long shoulder continued into the sleeve, had cordings of black satin and frills of white net hemstitched in black. Another blouse of shadow lace made up on kimono lines over a plain net lining had touches of grass green chiffon in little hemstitched revers and sleeve cuffs. Both combined perfectly with either dress, and a taffeta shirt blouse in maize yellow made still another complete change in the effect of the suits. A skirt of tiny black and white check, with a few washable voile blouses, and a couple of dancing frocks and a sport coat of yellow duvetyn completed an outfit that would meet the needs of the trip and last over well. The same idea could be carried out in any desired color tone, care being always taken that the shades all harmonized.

SMALL HATS AND THEIR TRIMMING.

Small shapes rule in the new showing and great use is made of black moire silk and ribbon. As usual at this season hats built of taffeta are smartly worn, but those either all silk or combined with Tagal braids are among the smartest models. Hats of black straw with high side flaring brims, or in round turban shapes have trimmings of moire rib-
