SERIOUS ERROR
IN MEYERSDALE.
Meyersdale Citizens will do Well to Profit by the Following.
Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Meyersdale there are many residents making the same error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork or worry, perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Meyersdale resident's experience.
John Gress, Meyersdale, Pa., says: "About a year ago I was troubled by my kidneys. My back ached and I was languid. I couldn't bend over in the morning, as my back felt so lame. A friend recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to me and I used them. I want to say that they are the best thing I ever took. I recommended them to my friends and keep them on hand all the time."
Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills the same Mrs. M. John Gress, recommends. Foster-Milburn Co. Prop., Buffalo, N. Y.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE ALLENSTEIN

Germany Forced Back From Russian Border—Million Men in Battle.
London, Eng.—The Chronicle's St. Petersburg correspondent sends the unofficial report that the Russian forces, hotly pursuing the German army, succeeded during the general confusion in entering the city of Koenigsberg, East Prussia, on the heels of the enemy and securing commands of the town.
Washington, D. C.—The capture of Allenstein and the investment of Koenigsberg, both cities in East Prussia, by the Russian armies was announced in a cablegram from the Paris foreign office to the French embassy here.
Rome, Italy.—Dispatches from Austrian headquarters to the Corriere Della Sera state that 1,000,000 men are engaged in the great battle which has been proceeding for three days on the Austro-Russian frontier. The battle line extends from the Vistula river to the Dniester river, over 100 miles.

Kaiser's Nephew, Prisoner.
Refuses to Give Parole and is Manacled to Guard.
Paris, France.—A trainload of prisoners passed through Acheres going westward. They included Count von Schwerin, a nephew of the Kaiser, who occupied a second-class compartment. He was wounded slightly. He was handcuffed to a gendarme, as he had refused to give his word of honor not to try to escape.

TURKS TO JOIN GERMANY

Will Attack Russia and England, According to Wireless to Washington.
Washington, D. C.—The probable entrance of Turkey into the European struggle as an ally of Germany and Austria and possible uprisings among Great Britain's Mohammedan subjects are forecast in a wireless message to the German embassy here, received from its foreign office in Berlin.

Torpedo Flotilla Runs into Typhoon.
Tokyo, Japan.—The commander of the first Japanese squadron has reported to the navy department that his torpedo flotilla ran into a typhoon. The boats were scattered and five men lost their lives as a result of the storm.
Journal Made to Pay $400,000.
London, Eng.—A Boulogne dispatch to the Standard says that the town of Tournai, capital of the Department of Hainaut, Belgium, occupied by the Germans, was compelled to pay an indemnity of $400,000 within an hour, the burgomaster being held as a hostage until the money was paid.

PLAN TO CHECK INVASION

Kaiser Wilhelm Sends Message to Cabinet From the Front.
Berlin, Germany.—The cabinet has received a personal communication from the Kaiser, who is at the front, saying that he is determined at once to care for the Prussian refugees driven from their homes by the Russian invasion. He directed that, at the present, they be cared for within the German lines of defense "until the Russian invasion is checked and it is possible for them to return to their homes."
The war office says that the plan for checking the Russian invasion will be pushed energetically and that additional reinforcements drawn from the reserve divisions are being rushed to the front. The belief is that the German army will engage the Russian invaders in a general battle as soon as the czar's forces come in contact with the first line of forts.

Hurry Troops to Fight Ruseans.
London, Eng.—One hundred and sixty railway trains loaded with German troops have passed through Belgium from the southwest toward the northeast, according to an Antwerp dispatch.
Five Army Corps Cross the Rhine.
Rome, Italy.—A dispatch to the Giornale d'Italia from Basel, Switzerland, says that three German army corps, two Austrian army corps, and a great quantity of siege artillery

BARTLETT'S DIGNITY

By S. H. COLE.

The dust cloud down the winding hilly road came nearer. Out of it proceeded now and then the strident honking of a motor horn. Then it reached the end of the driveway, swung in between the stone gateposts, and, the dust thinning out somewhat, Barbara Westcott saw the low, raking lines of a familiar roadcar.
Bob Westcott, her younger brother, his chair tilted back and his feet cocked up on the veranda's stone railing, looked up from the book he was reading.
"Well, here we are again!" he observed, his keen eyes on the approaching car. "Getting pretty frequent, isn't it, Bab? I never thought he was your sort, though."
"He isn't," said the girl, with a sudden tightening of her lips.
"Too blamed dignified and all that sort of thing," Bob went on. "Imagine ever calling him 'Herm. Bab!'"
"Little danger of that," said she tartly.
Bartlett's attentions of late had been assuming a gravity and a frequency that could have but one meaning. Barbara wrinkled those pretty brows of hers harder as the motor swung up to the veranda steps.
"Not intruding, Miss Barbara. I trust?" he said.
"Oh, no. I'm glad you came."
She held out her hand. Bartlett had a way of taking one's hand that was deference itself.
"Then you haven't any engagement for the afternoon?" he inquired.
"None whatever," said she.
"It's such a perfect day," said he, "I thought perhaps you'd like to take a little turn in the car—say out Redfield way. We could have a cup of tea at the Peach Tree Inn."
Barbara made a little grimace.
"I'm awfully tired of the Peach Tree and all the other places like it. They're so fearfully, fearfully proper."
Bartlett looked a little surprised at the outburst, but he said nothing.
"I'll tell you what I wish you would do," she rattled on. "Take me down to Oak Grove park, will you? I dare you to do it!"
Bartlett debated mentally.
"In the car?" he asked.
"Car?" said she. "Of course not. On the trolley. We'll eat peanuts all the way down."
She could hardly keep from chuckling; Bartlett seemed so distressed.
"We couldn't get back until nine or so," he demurred.
"Who cares? If you're afraid, never mind. I'll go alone. Only, my heart is set on going to Oak Grove park this afternoon."
"Of course I'll go," he interrupted.
"What time can we get a car?"
"Quarter past the hour in the square. I'll be ready in a minute."
Oak Grove park is a noisy, garish place. There are the usual hair-raising amusements, the usual crowd of vendors and fakers, and more or less hard-working pleasure-seekers.
Barbara glanced at her escort out of the corner of her eye. He reminded her of some stately cavalier going to a dog fight.
Bartlett followed meekly wherever she led him. He bought the tickets and was just as stately upside down on the loops as he was anywhere else.
Barbara, watching him, saw he was trying, in his own stiff way, to enter into the spirit of the occasion. What it must cost him she could well imagine. And when he suggested, as they finished the last of the amusements, that they do them all over again, she relented.
"No, take me home, now," she said, rather shortly.
They alighted at the square. He elbowed a way for her through the crowd and they turned into the quiet road that led up to her father's big estate.
The girl was very quiet. She did not speak until they were well down the road and quite alone.
"I'm a little cat," she went on at last.
"Fah?" said Bartlett, nothing of the sort. You're a jolly, whole-souled, democratic little girl that can do as the Romans do when you happen to be with the Romans."
"Don't!" she begged. "You're the one that's fine. I know what it meant to you to go through what you did this afternoon. I did it just to shock you, and I ate the peanuts to shock you, and rode the thrillers to shock you, and screamed at the top of my voice to shock you. And you were so nice about it all, so—"
"Why, say!" he interrupted her.
"Hold on! You're all wrong. I had the time of my life. Honestly I did."
"And I thought you were so dignified—so awfully, terribly dignified!" said she.
"Am I dignified?" he demanded.
"You're something better than that," she declared.
"What's that?" he asked.
"Dignity," said she.
"Little girl," he began.
"It's coming," sang the girl's heart. "I shan't let my dignity stand in the way of my happiness—now!"

What is Going on in This Part of the State
Mrs. James Long, of Portage, gave her infant daughter a dose of soothing syrup and then went out driving with her husband Sunday afternoon. Presently the mother thought the child had a peculiar look, and examinations showed that it had ceased to breathe. The soothing syrup is to be analyzed.

Three instructors of English in the Altoona High school, who have been spending their vacation in Europe are among the numerous Americans stranded there within war territory. By reason of the uncertainty of their returning in time to open school, the board has found it necessary to declare their places vacant and elect other teachers.
Two counties in Pennsylvania, Fayette and Westmoreland, which constitute the Connellsville coaling district, had a combined production of bituminous coal in 1913 of over 68,850,000 short tons, within 10 per cent. of the total production of West Virginia, the second coal-producing state in the union, and exceeding that of Illinois by about 4,000,000 tons.
An auto was run down by a Pennsylvania train at the Sligo crossing, Connellsville recently, perhaps fatally injuring C. B. Martin, of Smithfield, aged 25 years, one of the occupants.
Albert H. Hendershot, formerly of Bedford, was instantly killed by being struck by a passenger locomotive near his home at West Elizabeth, Allegheny county recently. Mr. Hendershot was constable of the township in which he lived.
While digging a deep outfall sewer for Altoona Tuesday the discovery of a six foot vein of bituminous coal was made in East Altoona. It is believed that this vein wholly underlies the Mountain City and prospectors have begun to investigate. The vein was uncovered for 400 feet while digging out the sewer.
The war in Europe has resulted in increased mining activities in West Virginia. In the last week one of the largest coal companies organized in the state within a year was incorporated, the Liberty Coal company of Fairmont, with an authorized capital of $2,000,000. A number of Johnstown, capitalists have recently entered the West Virginia field because of the great demand for coal now and in the future as the result of the European conflict.
A fatal disease is prevalent among horses in Worcester and Somerset counties. So serious is the situation that many farmers have appealed to Senator John Walter Smith for assistance. It is believed by some that it is spinal meningitis that is killing the horses.
The county commissioners of Greensburg have offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who on Friday night assaulted and killed Jacob K. Blank, a chauffeur, near the fair grounds, robbing him of $70.

THREE FRENCH CITIES TAKEN
Huge German Army Has Driven Back Allies
TEUTONS PUSH INTO FRANCE
Kaiser's Forces Occupied Valenciennes, Roubaix, Longwy and Other Towns After Severe Fighting. Namur Reported Fallen.

London, England.—The relentless progress of the great war of war—destructive, devastating—continues and is marked by many portentous features.
The announcement was made that Lille had fallen into the hands of the Germans without a struggle.
The Germans have occupied Valenciennes, Roubaix, Longwy and other towns after severe fighting, in which the allies were driven back.
Germany's advance was halted along the battle line from a point west of Lille to the Franco-Swiss frontier, while French forces assumed the offensive against three huge columns of the Kaiser's troops commanded by Crown Prince Wilhelm, Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria and Duke Albrecht of Wurtemberg.
British troops under command of Sir John French successfully engaged an advance of Germans which had pushed forward into France and Belgium.
The announcement that all the forts at Namur had at last been silenced by the Germans; the occupation of Ostend by British marines; the sinking of the west coast of Africa after a fight of the crack North German Lloyd ship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which had been preying upon British shipping; the sinking in the Gulf of Finland of the German ship Magdeburg by the Russian fleet; Russia's preparation for a general attack on Berlin in three weeks; Paris making laws for a siege, all make one realize the tremendous catastrophe that has befallen the world.
There were fights in many theaters of the great war; but the most serious engagements were along the 200-mile line which the German army took up on the Belgian frontier, but which has been extended into France in several places.
There was no fighting at Lille. London regards the surrender of Lille as an open admission of weakness in the French line of defense. The city has a population of 200,000, its factories are of great importance and wealth and its forts were declared to be capable of prolonged resistance.
The Germans striking the French at Brussels are believed to number 1,000,000 men. The fall of Lille is a serious blow to the allies, but cheer is found in London that the further the Germans advance in that direction the more its flanks and lines of communication will be threatened by the Belgian army based on Antwerp.

Reservists Taken from Vessels.
Honolulu.—The American liners Manchuri and China, of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's Oriental fleet, were halted by British warships off Hongkong, and forced to surrender 60 German and Austrian reservists bound for the European war from the Philippines. This news was brought by Capt. Thompson and Purser Landers of the China which arrived here, bound for San Francisco.

Practical Use of Seismograph.
Probably the most unusual purpose to which the seismograph has ever been put is that of determining the amount of vibrations in a locomotive as a result of unbalanced driving wheels. Engineers have devised some ingenious methods of cutting down this vibration which means a
