Oppenheimer Clothes

Unaffected by the War

The great conflagration in Europe has been seized by many manufacturers as an excuse for boosting prices, legitimately in some instances while in others absolutely unwarranted.

We, like many others, have been inconvenienced by the war. But we have been able to overcome the inconveniences and we can see no reason nor justice in arbitrarily placing a tax on the consumer.

And so Oppenheimer prices will remain the same, while Oppenheimer style and quality once more strikingly demonstrate their leadership in the medium price field.

A printed guarantee with every garment means money back should the slightest defect appear.

GARRETT.
The following was prophesied by Martin Luther, about 400 years ago and one of your subscribers gave this to me for you to publish. It is found in the Book of Sermons on Gospels, Vol. 14, page 394, verse 34, and is as follows:—Right unwillingly do I prophesy for I have often experienced how it came true but the same conditions alas prevail now. Everywhere, and I fear and must always resign myself that Germany may have the same experience as Sodom and Jerusalem and will be a thing of the past. It will either be destroyed by the Turks or it will crumble by its own hand. Unless the last day overtakes it soon, for the present conditions are all together unbearable and so exceedingly bad, that they cannot become worse and if there be still a God, he cannot let matters go on unpunished.
