Our Splendid Combination Offer!

Three Fine Magazines in Connection with The Commercial for $1.85.

Not wishing to handle the cheap, trashy magazines, often filled with questionable stories and advertisements unfit for the home and children's reading, we have made a contract by which our subscribers can obtain superior reading matter for a mere nominal price when combined with The Commercial, their favorite county which is a leader in quality.

For only $1.85 per year we will send the following with our paper:

The National Stockman And Farmer, being the world's greatest farm paper, and we would have you note that it is a weekly farm paper—not monthly as most others. You can't get this from the publishers for less than $1.00, The Woman's World, a very superior home paper, Kimball's Dairy Farmer, which comes every two weeks; these constitute a Great-Four Combination rarely equalled.

You can Get McCall's and Commercial through us for $1.60. We have other very attractive combinations.

LORE OF THE DAIRY.

When the cows have recovered their ample milk flow on the lush September grass, maintain it by judicious feeding. It is here that the benefit of the silo is demonstrated.

Silo is an essential part of the dairy cow's diet. See to it that she has free access to a liberal supply at all times.

Success in the dairy seems to be most all "s," separator, silo, scales—then the following letter. "L," test is a close second.

Good care consists in doing everything from milking and caring for the cows to marketing the butter or cream as if your whole life success depended on it.

Successful dairying means that it is vital to steer clear of dry cows and indifferent producers. High priced feed brings this home.

DISTRIBUTING AND PACKING SILAGE

(Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Unless there is some one in the silo to distribute and tramp the material the cut material will be thrown too much in one place and the leaves, stalks and grain will not be uniformly distributed, says farmers' bulletin No. 578 of the United States department of agriculture. The sides should be kept higher than the center of the whole surface, while tramping should be done close to the wall.

Various contrivances have been used for distributing the silage. The one most to be recommended for this purpose, however, is a metal pipe similar to the one in which the cut corn is elevated, but put together loosely in sections. The corn from the blower passes down this pipe into the silo, and, being loosely put together, it can be swung so that the material can be placed anywhere in the silo. With this contrivance no work with a fork is necessary and one man can do the work of two or three and do it more easily. There is very little loose material flying about in the silo, and the work is much cleaner. Another advantage is a lessening of the danger of being struck by some foreign object which might pass up the blower pipe. Heavy knives of the cutter have been known to pass through the blower and into the silo. The pipe is put together

The Holstein cow is larger, stronger and longer lived than any other dairy breed, say the admirers of the black and whites. The calves are stronger, harder and easier raised. They raise nearly all of their calves. They resist diseases well. They are more free from tuberculosis than other breeds, as a rule. They give, therefore, a pure, wholesome milk, more nearly like that of the human being. It is better for babies and invalids than any milk. It is not so rich in butter fat per gallon as the milk of the Jersey, but because a Holstein gives more milk she will yield more butter per cow than a Jersey. The Holstein bull shown was a prize winner last fall.

in sections so that as the silage rises in the silo the sections can be readily detached.

In case the material has become too dry before it is put into the silo water should be added to supply the moisture necessary to make the silage pack properly. Unless it is well packed the silage will "fire fang" or deteriorate through the growth of mold. Enough water should be added to restore the moisture content of the corn to what it would be if cut at the proper stage. The water may be added by running directly into the silo by means of a hose or by running through the blower. It is claimed that by running it into the blower the water is more thoroughly mixed with the cut corn.

It seems to be good practice, no matter what the condition of the corn is, to wet down the material thoroughly at the top of the silo when through filling.

Several years ago it was a common practice to cover the silage with some material, such as dirt or cut straw, in order to prevent the top layer from spoiling. At present when any provision at all is made for this purpose it consists usually in merely running in on top cornstalks from which the ears have been removed.

Alfalfa and Mangels.

It would be difficult to find a much better combination than alfalfa and mangels for feeding dairy cows. There is no question but that alfalfa is far better than any other hay for feeding with mangels or anything else.—Hoard's Dairyman.
