

Official Returns of the Election Held Tuesday, November 2, 1915.

SALISBURY

Very few people ever even dreamed that Salisbury can boast of having a snake charmer, but such was demonstrated not long ago when Wm. C. Wagner appeared on the streets with a real live snake about two feet in length. When exhibiting the reptile he carried his pet in his bosom or in his coat pocket. The snake seemed very tame and when put down on the pavement or upon the floor would either crawl along or on certain movements of the snake charmer, it would turn over on its back and "play possum" and the snake was therefore called "possum snake."

The snake was a rare species as few ever saw one like it. It had a pointy head and its body resembled that of a rattlesnake, having spots exactly like the male rattlesnake but William the snake charmer was not to keep this pet. After exhibiting about town he decided to go to Ira Hay's picture show and of course took Mr. Snake with him. While in the show his snakeship got tired being kept concealed in his master's pocket and made his escape. There was quite a commotion among the audience when it was discovered that there was a snake at large, for you may know what disturbance even a mouse can make among the ladies and a snake of which even most men are afraid, certainly will cause all kinds of terror in a crowd. Search was made for the escaped prisoner but he had found a hole in the floor and had escaped much to the satisfaction of the audience, only the charmer regretted the loss of his pet. It would be a good idea for Jere Shumaker, the Negro Mountain Snakeologist, to take Mr. Wagner along when he goes to the mountain to hunt the rattler for they could then catch many of them alive if "Wm. C." could get them under the "spell."

Lloyd Miller, of Springs, Pa., passed through town on Saturday night on his way home from a business trip to Summit township and Meyersdale. Born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reitz, on Friday, November 5th, a daughter, Miss Amyre, a nurse of the Western Maryland Hospital, spent last week as the guest of Mr and Mrs. M. J. Glotfelty.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Algire and son who have been living in Michigan, last week visited Mrs. Algire's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Livengood. They will move to Tennessee in the near future.

On Friday evening, October 29th, Miss Edna Diehl gave a masquerade party to about forty of her friends at the home of her brother, Henry Diehl in West Salisbury.

Miss Florence Maust entertained the A. N. D. Club Wednesday evening. The home of J. L. Baruch is quarantined on account of his little son, Daniel, having an attack of chicken-pox and the home of Prof. J. C. Beam is again quarantined on account of typhoid fever with which several members of the family being afflicted with the disease. One member has recently recovered.

(Part of this letter we are sorry to say had to be held over until next week. Ed.)
