

TO KEEP APPLES.

"The apple crop is irregular in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in America this year. In some local places there is a good crop, and in many others there is but a partial crop. However, there are enough apples to give all a fair supply at a fair price," says H. A. Surface, state zoologist, department of agriculture, Harrisburg.

In discussing the subject of keeping apples he said: "To keep apples, a person should select sprayed fruit. It has been well proven that sprayed fruit keeps much better than that which has not been sprayed. There are two reasons for this. One is that it is without damage by insects or fungus diseases at the time it is put in storage; and even though not sprayed an undamaged apple keeps much longer than one that is damaged. The second reason is that the exceedingly minute amount of fungicidal material applied to an apple in the process of spraying, while not in the least bit harmful to a person eating the apple, still retains enough of its fungicidal properties to prevent the ready action of disease germs.

To keep fruit well it should be sorted and all are injured by insects especially the codling moth, and all that have the least evidence of rotting or specking, or damage by fungus disease, should be rejected and used immediately. Also, all fruits damaged by bruises, and especially by falling and piercing or cutting the skin, as by stones or stubbles, should be selected for immediate use and certainly not be put aside for storage. In other words store only sound fruit which is not cut, bruised, cut, or broken.

Put the apples into rooms that can be ventilated, but at the same time be kept from freezing. Open the windows or ventilators at night, and while the air is warmer outside than inside during the day close them so as to keep the interior of the fruit room cool. An abundance of cold, fresh air is important in keeping fruit.

It should not be too dry, or it will cause the fruit to shrivel. Fruit kept in a real dry room does not come out of storage as plump and fresh as that in a room containing more or less moisture. Therefore, kettles, or barrels of water in a fruit room are sometimes helpful. They are also useful in preventing the freezing of the fruit because of the immense amount of latent heat given off by the water when it commences to freeze. The fruit does not freeze at a temperature quite so high as that for the freezing of the water, but it is too risky to attempt to hold the fruit in a room where ice crystals have commenced to form on water in the most exposed or coldest part of the room. Often an iron kettle containing some live coals will be sufficient to warm a room to the safety point. Outside banking on the windward side is important. Occasional ventilation is secured and the essential work of sorting out spoiled fruit later in the winter is facilitated.

AUTOMOBILE ACT TO BE RIGIDLY ENFORCED.

Applications for 1916 licenses are coming into the State Highway Department in great numbers but State Highway Commissioner Cunningham has issued a statement in which he again called upon owners and operators of automobiles to get their applications for license tags in at an early date. The statement particularly urged those owners operating five or more cars to hurry their applications along. Prompt action by these owners will do away with much of the congestion which has arisen in previous years in the Automobile Division of the State Highway Department.

Another class of owners to whom the Commissioner particularly addressed his appeal are those operating jitneys. The enormous increase in automobile traffic in congested centres the last year is due largely to the operation of jitneys, causing the State Highway Commissioner to lay great stress on this in the statement just issued.

While the statement is so worded as not to express threats of what will be done to those who fail to make their applications in time, yet the Commissioner made it plain that a rigid enforcement of the provisions of the Automobile Act would be undertaken and that those who neglect to apply for licenses need expect no leniency.

NEW POSTAL RULING.

The postal authorities at Washington recognizing the liability of postmasters to make mistakes in getting letters in the wrong boxes, have fixed a penalty of $200 on persons taking mail out of an office other than their own, and not returning it immediately. The excuse that it is the postmaster's fault cuts no ice. If you have been getting other people's mail you had better take warning or you may get yourself into trouble.

YOU as a good housekeeper are particular about the coffee you buy. Experience has taught you that an expensive percolator, a dainty coffee service or a skilled cook cannot of themselves make good coffee. Hence you buy only that coffee whose quality is assured.

Just as surely as coffee to be fragrantly delicious must originate from a good bean, correctly and freshly ground, so also the best crude petroleum and careful scientific refining are necessary to a high-grade kerosene. There is such a kerosene—it's

ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL

It's the one kerosene you can buy by name. It will leave no soot and it doesn't smoke. It burns without smell, shedding an even, soft yet brilliant light, and, when put in a stove or heater, it gives quick, certain results at a low fuel cost.

But, with all these qualities, its price is identical with the unknown and possibly poorly refined kind. Ask for Atlantic Rayolight Oil and then you can be certain you're buying the best at a price you'd pay for the ordinary product.

Give your rubber plants a bath of Atlantic Rayolight Oil and tepid water—it makes them glossy and beautiful and kills the bugs that would otherwise eventually wither them up.

That's only one use out of many. What do you do with kerosene? If you've got a good use, perhaps you may be able to exchange it for a beautiful stove. See these advertisements.

Keep the Bathroom Well Ventilated

It doesn't smoke, is inexpensive to buy and to use. You'll find it at practically all dealers.

OUR PUBLIC FORUM

Wm. G. McAdoo
On Woman Suffrage.

The question of Woman Suffrage is before the American people for disposition and it is the duty of every citizen to study diligently and dispassionately every phase of the issue. The leading exponents of both sides of the subject have spoken and the arguments have been ably and conclusively presented.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo defined his position on suffrage several years ago when he pleaded for equality to women in connection with the employment of women as ticket takers in the Hudson River tubes. In response to inquiries as to his attitude on woman suffrage in New York state, which will be voted on at the November election, the secretary said:

"I shall vote for the woman suffrage amendment to the New York state constitution. Women are an economic feature of constantly increasing importance in organized society. In business and industrial life they have been forced to play a larger and more conspicuous part than ever before in the world's history. They have met these new demands and responsibilities without impairment of their higher and paramount duties to society. I am sure that all the theoretical objections against their exercise of the right of suffrage will prove as groundless as were the earlier objections of the same sort to their larger participation in the business and industrial life of the nation.

"The right to vote may, and I hope will, strengthen the power of women to assist in bringing many social and moral reforms in which they are equally, if not more vitally, interested than men. Suffrage may give them the opportunity of contributing notably to the progress of civilization and the advancement of the general welfare. Certainly, as the weaker sex, women are entitled to at least an equal opportunity with the stronger sex, and especially in all that intimately concerns the welfare of both.

"The American women have made a game fight and a fair fight for suffrage and are entitled to win. They have appealed to the reason and intelligence of the country and have not adopted militant methods. They also have taken the right course in resorting to each state for action upon a question which is peculiarly within the province of the states themselves."
